Architect's Drawing Arts Building

Buildings at a Standstill?

Although September 1 is the date set for the completion of the Arts Building and Nurses' Dormitory, today the buildings look deceivingly unfinished. Beams jut nakedly into the sky. But at their bases lie huge concrete slabs, each slab either a floor or roof which will be raised next spring to the specified level.

All floors and the roof of the Nurses' Dormitory are already poured, with the third floor and roof of the Arts Building waiting for favorable weather. Electrical conduits and some plumbing and heating lines are threaded through the poured floors.

The window frames for both buildings have arrived, and the doors are on order for delivery in February. The bricks with which the buildings will be faced have been ordered and will be delivered as needed.

The slabs of the Nurses' Dormitory are scheduled to be raised in February, and the bricklaying will begin as soon thereafter as the weather permits.

Although the schedule calls for the completion of both buildings by September 1, the dormitory will be given preference. Be sure to tour the completed buildings during Home coming '56.

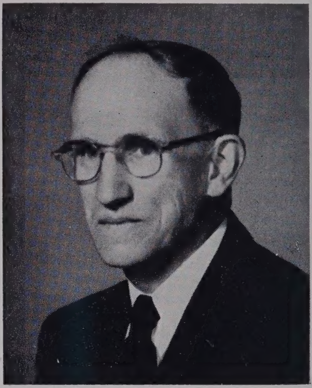
American Mennonites Publish Encyclopedia

by N. P. Springer, Curator, Mennonite Historical Library

Deserving to be called the most significant book published to date by American Mennonites, the first volume of the Mennonite Encyclopedia appeared in November, bringing to partial fruition the combined efforts of many persons through the past ten years. Three American publishing agencies co-operated in underwriting the project and are responsible for distribution within their own constituencies: the Mennonite Brethren Publishing House, Hillsboro, Kans., for the Mennonite Brethren Church; the Mennonite Publication Office, Newton, Kans., for the General Conference Mennonite Church; and the Mennonite Publishing House, Scottdale, Pa., for the Mennonite Church. The last-named firm did the printing and handles general distribution and sales. The three groups are also represented on the board of editors and the publishing committee.

H. S. Bender

When the work was begun, C. Henry Smith x95, fac 03-13, lately of Bluffton, Ohio, and Harold S. Bender 18, fac 24- , Goshen, Ind., were appointed as editors. The former's death in 1948 placed the top responsibility on Bender alone. Cornelius Krahn of Bethel College, North Newton, Kans., is associate editor, and Melvin Gingerich 26, fac 49- , Goshen, is managing editor. The group of assistant editors includes Ernst Crous, exchange professor 49-50, Göttingen, Germany; Robert Friedmann 43, pt fac 40-41, Kalamazoo, Mich.; P. C. Hiebert, Hillsboro, Kans.; C. F. Klassen (d. 1954), lately of Abbotsford, B.C.; S. F. Pannabecker, Chicago; John G. Rempel, Rosthern, Sask.; P. E. Schellenberg, Hillsboro, Kans.; John C. Wenger 34, fac 38- , Goshen; and N. van der Zijpp, Rotterdam, Netherlands. The publishing committee, representing the three publishing firms, is composed of Paul Erb, fac 39-46, Scottdale, Pa., chairman; H. J. Andres, Newton, Kans., secretary; Orlando Harms, Hillsboro, Kans.; P. E. Schellenberg, Hillsboro; Abram M. Wiebe 46, Newton; and A. J. Metzler, Scottdale, publishing agent.



Melvin Gingerich

With European articles based on the Mennonitisches Lexikon, published in Germany beginning in 1913 and completed to the letter "O" by 1942, when World War II brought a pause in the work, the Mennonite Encyclopedia is more than a translation of the Lexikon. The 749 pages of the first volume, covering the letters "A" through "C," contain hundreds of articles written expressly for the Encyclopedia. The list of 470 writers of articles is an indication of the earnest endeavor of the editors to secure information from those who are best qualified to give it, either by firsthand experience, or by acquaintance with their subjects through research. Their addresses show a wide geographic spread, including many places in the United States, Canada, Europe, and South America.

Ten years seems a long time for one volume such as this to emerge. To one who has been associated with a project by proximity as I have through these ten years the length of time needed is easy to understand. Throughout this time the central editorial office, headquarters for the editor and the managing editor, has been located in the basement of the Goshen College Library. Working in the same room or an adjoining room, I could see the vast amount of basic planning, the struggles through problems of style, terminology, and uniform spelling, and other spade work for the projected set of four volumes which had to be done before the first volume could go to press. Aside from this preliminary work, there were hundreds of letters to be sent enlisting writers, follow-up letters and acknowledgments to be sent, copy to be edited to assure uniformity of style and appropriate length and then to be distributed to other editors for checking, edited copy to be gone over with a fine-toothed comb and redistributed to a limited group of editors, galley proofs to be read and to be clipped to send to original writers, late copy to be inserted, and page proofs to be read. The distances between the central editorial office and writers, other editors, and printers, added immeasurably to the work and the costs of production. Few will guess how much the work taxed the editors physically. Finally, the Mennonite Encyclopedia appeared, resplendent in its red dust jacket.

In the midst of all of this labor of those around me, I had the experience of attending library school. Among my courses was one in reference books for the humanities and the social sciences. As we learned to look at these books and to examine them critically, I thought more than once of the projected Mennonite Encyclopedia. How would the people of my profession receive this book? Would it supply the information they expected from it? Would it be a creditable job from the standpoint of style, accuracy, consistency, convenient arrangement, etc.? After I returned to Goshen and saw it taking shape, I had increasing confidence that it would be thoroughly respectable from every standpoint. It is a book that no large library can afford to be without—an authentic reference book on the total Anabaptist-Mennonite movement, packed with information on history, doctrine, life, personalities, institutions, and achievements of a group that is receiving more attention each year from scholar and layman alike. The inquiries which come to my desk from scattered places throughout the United States make me bold to say that every public library in our country should have a copy. Sunday-school and church libraries in Mennonite congregations should certainly have copies.

When you ask if it is only a book for libraries, I hasten to recommend it as a book for the private collection as well, particularly for Mennonites. In your home it will be at hand for ready reference to answer many questions for you. Being an encyclopedia, though, it will leave a few unanswered. It makes good browsing. I'll admit, it is rather frustrating to read through four pages of Anabaptist martyrs and then suddenly be confronted with four lines about a church in Michigan, but you get used to the change of thought and time after several evenings of browsing. Surely from among such subjects as Abrath, Abstinence, Agriculture among the Mennonites of Russia, Alcohol, Almosenpfleger, Architecture, Arkadak, Art, Baptism, Barns, Bible: Inner and Outer Word, Boots, Bruderhof, Business, Catechism, Community of Goods, and Co-operatives, you will find one that interests you. The first volume of the Encyclopedia is sprinkled with maps drawn especially for it, and includes forty-one pages of illustrations, with from two to nine pictures on each page.

Mrs. H. S. Bender

A word should be said about our own alumni who had a part in the preparation of the book. Some have been indicated in the early paragraphs of this review. The editorial council of fifty persons includes nine persons from our faculty-alumni group, while slightly more than one sixth of the persons from among the list of writers come from this group. (There is some overlapping between personnel on the editorial board, editorial council, and list of writers.) With the exception of Liesel Widmer and Waltraud Claassen, MCC exchange trainees from Europe, perhaps all of the secretarial assistants in the central editorial office have been Goshen College students. Alumni employed at the Mennonite Publishing House had a part in the mechanics of production and will share in the task of promotion and distribution. Special mention should be given to two persons serving in an editorial capacity whose names do not appear on the editorial board nor on the editorial council. Ellrose Zook 33, executive editor of the Mennonite Publishing House, bore the responsibility of co-ordinating the work of the editors with that of the printers, helping them through the difficulties of establishing and maintaining consistency in style, terminology, and typology. Mrs. H. S. Bender (Elizabeth Horsch) 18, fac 25-31, 34-39, 48- , translated articles from the German Mennonitisches Lexikon and assisted with final copy editing and proofreading. Her thorough knowledge of German, her acquaintance with European as well as American Mennonites, and her fine discrimination in grammar and style made her assistance invaluable. She worked long, hard hours. In the meantime, she has become somewhat of an Anabaptist-Mennonite authority in her own right. Currently the work in the central office is handicapped by the absence of Melvin Gingerich, who served as managing editor until he sailed for Japan late last summer. To all who have participated in this project we owe a word of commendation for a task well done.

East Goshen Lighthouse

A Light Shines

Ray Keim

The Mennonite witness in the eastern part of the city of Goshen, Ind., began as a part of the extension program of the Goshen College Y.P.C.A. In the thirties students conducted Sunday school in a celery shed in East Goshen. Later this Sunday school moved to the northern part of the city and developed into the North Goshen Mennonite Church. Early in the forties a second Sunday school was started in East Goshen. At first a white building sixteen by twenty-four feet was used, but it was soon abandoned in favor of a basement church, which was larger. Roy D. Roth 43, Weyburn Groff 44 and Ford Berg 45 served as superintendents of the work during those early years.

When Paul M. Miller 49 was appointed as superintendent in the fall of 1946, there were two members in the little flock. On March 9, 1947, he was ordained as minister by Paul Mininger 34, who had bishop oversight of the work.

During this time a large group of college students were active in visitation work, tract distribution and teaching. Here was a real opportunity for Christian service of which many young people took advantage. Some of the workers at this time were Amos Bauman pt48 and his wife, who live in the community, Marie Moyer 48, David 46 and Maxine (Troyer) AA45 Derstine, Elmer Borntrager x49, Flora Jean (Hostetler) Martin 47, Rheta Mae (Hostetler) Wiebe 49, Carol x49 and Marie 47 Yoder, Robert Keller 47, Paul Lederach 45, Eunice (Litwiller) Miller 45, and Lois (Johns) Yoder 45.

The group continued to worship in the basement church until 1948, when the present brick structure was built on East Lincoln Avenue. Eugene Blosser 49 was appointed to serve as assistant pastor. Later John 54 and Miriam (Weaver) 55 Beachy served in this capacity until their return to India in January, 1954. In March of the same year Ray Keim x55 was ordained to the ministry and serves as assistant pastor at present.

Other persons that will long be remembered in East Goshen for their service are Gladys Stoltzfus 49, Robert 50 and Rachel (Horst) 51 Stoltzfus, Ed 49 and Margaret (Gingerich) 49 Kauffman, Lowell x50 and Miriam x45 Nissley, Mrs. Lawrence Burkholder (Harriet Lapp) 37, W. J. Dye 48, Norman 54 and Fanny Teague, Bill 52 and Marilyn (Horst) 53 Klassen, Glen Brubaker 55, Virgil 51 and Helen (Good) pt52 Brenneman and Loretta Mayer x50. Many of these and other persons who have worked at East Goshen have gone to other fields of service and have contributed greatly to the work of the Mennonite Church.

The East Goshen Mennonite Church has adopted a method of outreach in the community which is somewhat unique in Mennonite evangelistic work by establishing an outpost in the poorer section south of the church to try to draw these people into the main fellowship on East Lincoln Avenue. This outpost, known as "The Lighthouse," was organized when it became evident that the church program alone was not adequate to really reach everyone with the Gospel.

The Lighthouse is a modern cement block structure built with funds contributed by the businessmen of the city of Goshen. The East Goshen Mennonite congregation furnished the labor for construction and is furnishing the money for the continuing program. Amos Bauman has served as superintendent of the work ever since it started, while Loretta Mayer and Monroe Miller w43 are the other members of the staff.

The declared objectives of the program are five in number: (1) to saturate the area with the Gospel by intensive personal witness, Sunday school activities, Christian literature distribution, and Bible memory work; (2) to form redemptive friendships, which includes invitations from members to nonmembers to come into their homes and to Lighthouse programs on Tuesday and Thursday evenings and by showing general good will to the residents of the community; (3) to provide long-range education in Christian living through cooking schools for the girls, lessons on hygiene, simple vocabulary and reading lessons and children's meetings; (4) to receive saved ones into the church by Wednesday evening classes at the church and instruction classes for those desiring to be baptized; (5) to serve as a pilot program for other church groups. Much of this work is experimental, and our failures and successes can be passed on to other groups who would like to serve a community in this way.

The East Goshen community is a cosmopolitan group in which there are several strata of society. Many of the boys have been in trouble with the civil authorities; many children are unclean and neglected; disease spreads rapidly. Some of the children have been placed in foster homes by the Welfare Society. It is a needy field, and no outstanding results have been accomplished. Often in the face of indifference, even of outright hostility, the workers are driven to their knees in supplication to God for guidance. However, there are times of encouragement when souls do find Christ precious and sufficient and start the long climb upward to take their place in society as followers of the Lord Jesus Christ. Especially encouraging were the words of Vernon Cripe, sheriff of Elkhart County, in March, 1954, when the Lighthouse was dedicated to the service of God in the community. He said, in essence, "I wish there could be a Lighthouse on every street corner in Goshen."

Paul Bender Serves in Holland

Paul fac 32- and Bertha (Burkholder) 54 Bender sailed in January for a two-year Mennonite Central Committee appointment in Holland.

Stationed at the Dutch Peace Center at Heerewegen, the Benders will be working with Dutch Pastor A. van Gilse who recently visited the Goshen College campus. The Heerewegen center is a conference meeting place for both Dutch Mennonites and Mennonite Central Committee workers from America. In addition to serving as MCC representative in Holland, Paul will also work closely with the Peace Movement in other western European countries.

On leave from his position as Registrar of Goshen College first semester, Paul has been working on a study of Mennonite Higher Education. He presented a report to the General Education Council of the Mennonite Board of Education at their regular meeting in Chicago on Jan. 3.

The Benders spent an orientation period at the headquarters of the Mennonite Central Committee, Akron, Pa., before sailing.

Vesper Quartet Sings Again

From four continents the Vesper Quartet members gathered for a Jan. 2 reunion after six years in their widely separated fields of service. The quartet, organized in 1946, first sang in the fall of 1946 at the get-acquainted social in the old gymnasium. Quartet members include Ralph Wade 49, Ralph 48 and Albert 47 Buckwalter, and David Shank 48.

Ralph Wade, after six years of teaching music at Fisher, Ill., punctuated by summers at University of Illinois, has earned his M.S. degree, and is this year a member of the music faculty at his Alma Mater.

Pioneer missionaries in Japan, Ralph and Genevieve Lehman 49 Buckwalter have been located at Kushiro, mining and fishing center on the island of Hokkaido. Ralph will attend the Goshen College Biblical Seminary second semester.

Albert, his wife (Lois Litwiller 44) and family, missionaries on furlough from the Chaco, Argentina, now live in Connecticut where Albert attends the Kennedy School of Missions at Hartford. On this furlough Albert has also attended the Summer School of Linguistics, University of Oklahoma, and plans to spend second semester at Southern Baptist Seminary, Louisville, Ky. This training is to equip him for further translation of the Bible into the language of the Toba Indians.

David and Wilma (Hollopeter 46) Shank, who opened the Mennonite mission work in Belgium, are now living in Blooming Glen, Pa., while Dave studies at the Eastern Baptist Seminary, Philadelphia, in preparation for his further work in Belgium.

The quartet sang a number of their former favorites including "There Is a Green Hill Far Away" and "Spirit of the Living God."

Aid to Students

For a decade and a half Goshen College has made few changes in its scholarships and grants-in-aid for students. Parts of the plan had been in effect for a quarter of a century. Changes in economic conditions and in the pattern of college enrollments called for a restudy of the total program of financial aid to students. Last year President Paul Mininger appointed a faculty committee to make a study. Their findings and suggestions have guided the plan of financial aid which will appear in the new college catalog to be released soon.

As in the past, the college continues to offer financial assistance to its students in the form of scholarships, grants, loans, and work appointments. Differentiating between scholarships and other types of financial aid, the catalog states that scholarships are granted primarily upon the basis of academic performance, while grants, loans, and campus employment are given primarily upon the basis of financial need. There is a reduction in the number of scholarships and an increase in the number of grants, indicating a greater emphasis on financial need. This is as it should be for a Christian college.

From the standpoint of the student, one of the greatest weaknesses in the program, it seems to me, is the fact that no specific loan fund is available to students outside of the School of Nursing. Two such funds have been provided for student nurses. In the past, the business officers have arranged to carry a needy student on his personal note. They plan to continue to do so in the future. There is a provision that a student is eligible for a scholarship or grant only if he has completed payment of his previous year's account before the close of the fiscal year. A properly arranged loan is considered a satisfactory answer to this provision. But, even so, it is conceivable that a particularly needy student may be denied the financial assistance available to less needy students, because he has been unable to pay his previous year's account. It has happened in the past; it might happen again.

From the standpoint of the college, one of the weak points in the system is the fact that much of this financial aid to students must come from the operating budget. Individual alumni or alumni groups who want to make special gifts to the college of substantial amounts of money might well consider contributing to the general program of financial aid to students, either through direct gifts for this purpose, or through endowments. A number of the special scholarships are so underwritten or endowed. While I would not minimize the importance of special scholarships, I would encourage support of the general program rather than gifts earmarked for specific scholarships or grants. A scholarship with too many stipulations tends to become obsolete or unrealistic in the light of changing world conditions.

While we are not living in a time of general need such as the depression years of the thirties, the higher cost of living and greater prosperity for the average person may be the very thing that works hardship to some. We trust that the program of financial aid for Goshen College students will remain flexible, and that, above all, it will work more and more to the aid of the student who has the greatest need. May no deserving student be turned away from sharing the privileges we have had of attending Goshen College.

Daniel Kauffman 46, business manager of Hesston College and Bible School, lays the facts of faculty salaries at Hesston College before the readers of This Month at Your College in his column in the February issue. He begins by telling of a man who wrote to him that he had just learned what Mennonite colleges are paying their faculty, and that he is ashamed that such a condition exists. Are you as alumni, who only a few years ago may have griped about or sneered at the low rates paid student employees, aware that this hourly rate may have been nearly as great as, or even greater than what your professor was earning, when you calculated his salary on an hourly basis and divided it by the number of persons he was supporting?

Choruses Present Program

The combined Collegiate and A Cappella choruses presented "The Seven Last Words" by Josef Haydn, Feb. 26, under the direction of Dwight Weldy 40.

In "The Seven Last Words," written for use in the Good Friday services of the early nineteenth-century church, the chorus chants the seven last phrases of Christ on the cross. Appropriate music then follows each chanting, and the story of the earthquake in musical form climaxes the whole.

Although there are no solo parts as such, a solo quartet sings antiphonally with the chorus. The quartet parts were sung by an octet composed of Martha Musselman 57, Gettysburg, Pa., and Carol Teuscher 58, Pigeon, Mich., sopranos; Dorothy Imhoff 58, Eureka, Ill., and Arlene Litwiller 57, Tremont, Ill., altos; Jack Redekop 56, Mountain Lake, Minn., and Robert Otto 57, Springs, Pa., tenors; Richard Nase 59, Souderton, Pa., and Lavon Yoder 58, Goshen, basses.

Roselle Yoder fac 56- played the piano accompaniment.

German Art Exhibit

The Mennonite Central Committee has received from the German people a valuable collection of graphics and paintings as a symbol of gratitude for the postwar aid given to them. The exhibit, which is being displayed this year by various Mennonite colleges, was on display at Goshen March 1-10.

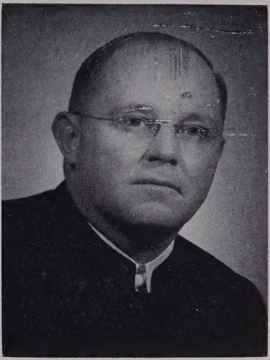
These works are highly valued, not only as an expression of gratitude, but for the sensitive ways in which the subjects are handled and the intricate detail of the artists' handwork. Some of the prints are also valuable for their combination of mediums.

Most of the prints are done in the medium of wood block or etching. Several combine engraved line work with the larger tonal areas produced by the wood block or the etched surface. A few are lithograph prints and resemble a drawing in black crayon.

Color is used extensively in some of the prints and with more reserve in others. About one third are striking in black and white.

Theodor Heuss, Federal President of Germany, in presenting the gift to MCC wrote: ". . . Since that time we Germans have a great debt of gratitude. For years the German people have received gifts from others; today we ourselves should like to be the bearers of a modest gift. Our gratitude is expressed through works of art which were created by contemporary German artists, many of whom are themselves living in distressed circumstances. The money for the purchase of these works of art was raised by millions of Germans. . . ."

Gideon Yoder Presents Lectures



Gideon G. Yoder

The 1956 Conrad Grebel Lectures entitled "The Education and Evangelization of Children" were delivered during the months of January and February by Gideon G. Yoder 52, Hesston, Kans.

The four addresses, "A Statement of the Problem," "Theories of Education and Evangelism," "The Religion of Childhood and Adolescence," and "Some Practical Implications in Education and Evangelism," were presented at Goshen Feb. 13-15. Gideon also delivered the lectures at Hesston College, Hesston, Kans., where he is Professor of Practical Theology and Church History, Jan. 23-27; Eastern Mennonite College, Harrisonburg, Va., Jan. 31 to Feb. 3; and Scottdale, Pa., Feb. 21-24.

Gideon's experience and training, including the B.A. and M.A. degrees from Friends University and Phillips University respectively, the B.R.E. and B.D. degrees from the Goshen College Biblical Seminary, and the Th.M. degree from Princeton Theological Seminary, have prepared him well to make this type of study.

The Conrad Grebel Lectureship, under which Gideon prepared these lectures, is a living endowment provided annually by a number of interested sponsors with the purpose of furthering research and study of topics relating to the history, theology, service, life, and practice of the Mennonites.

Other Conrad Grebel lecturers have included Paul Mininger 34, Milo Kauffman, Guy F. Hershberger fac. 25- , and Paul Erb fac. 39-46.

Around the World on a Violin

by Robert Friedmann

(We share with alumni friends of Martin Friedmann x51 an account of his travels sent us by his father, Robert Friedmann 43, pt fac 41, Kalamazoo, Michigan. ed.)

After Martin had finished his two years of I-W service in a mental hospital on Long Island, he decided to widen his world outlook by undertaking a trip around the globe with very little money in his pockets and a violin on his shoulders. He secured all the necessary visas and bought boat tickets from Seattle to Japan and thence as far as Marseille, France. (It was necessary for him to get all of the visas; no country wants anyone who would not be able to move on and away from that country.)

Martin started early in January of 1955, sailing on the first Japanese boat to stop at Honolulu after World War II. In Japan he was entertained by Charles Burkhart and Carl Kreider. Somehow the Japanese press got interested, too, and Martin found a tremendous response. He gave one concert in Kyoto with a former American friend and had fine success (and a renewed supply of money). Japan was truly grand, only too short. After twenty days he sailed on a Japanese freighter directly to Bangkok, Thailand, where he stayed several days. Then he undertook a trip by railroad, bus, and oxcart into Cambodia to see the famous ruins at Angkor Wat (twelfth century). Although this trip taxed his energies, it proved highly rewarding. Back in Bangkok Martin received a wire that he should come right away to Mussoorie, India, to teach violin and direct the school orchestra in the well-known preparatory school, Woodstock. So he took a plane at Woodstock's expense and flew to Delhi stopping overnight only at the Calcutta airport.

From early March to early December Martin taught at Woodstock, 7,000 feet high in the foothills of the Himalaya mountains. Nineteen different nations are represented in the student body, among them a former Kalamazoo girl. Bob Kauffman (grandson of the late Daniel Kauffman) teaches piano there as his I-W service.

From Woodstock Martin took a number of interesting side trips—first, into the surrounding mountain area, where he studied the folklore of the mountain folk and their festivals and dances. Quite often he went down to Debra Dun, the nearest big city, located at the foot of the mountain road to Mussoorie, where he wanted to study the sitar, a quaint musical instrument something like the guitar, which the Indian people play, sitting cross-legged on the floor. He sent one of these instruments home, and we have it here in Kalamazoo.

In June the monsoon period begins—rain without end—when everyone tries to go to the mountains. Martin and a friend went to Kashmir, going by bus and returning by plane. They were in Srinagar near the glaciers at an elevation of 14,000 feet. It must have been one of the finest experiences of his entire trip; the views are magnificent, and the souvenirs he sent—decorated boxes and other things—look extremely fine.

In September Martin went to the famous Muslim mausoleum Taj Mahal near the ancient city of Agra, where the Mogul emperors used to live. This visit, too, was extremely successful and enriching. Next came a trip to Pakistan—to Lahore and beyond as far as the world-famous Khyber Pass in the northwest province (where people run around with daggers and guns just to make life interesting). In Lahore Martin gave a recital, as he also did in New Delhi. He also played over the All-India Radio (Delhi) together with Bob Kauffman, again earning somewhat toward his living expenses.

On Dec. 1, Martin quit teaching at Woodstock to continue his world trip. First he went down to Lucknow, where he played for the YMCA, and from where he entered Nepal, the small kingdom at the foot of Mount Everest, whose capital is Katmandu. From here we know but one word: "Wonderful Nepal." He played twice in Nepal, once for a general audience, and once with Bob Kauffman for the king of Nepal. Then he was flown out in the private plane of the crown prince to Darjeeling and on to Calcutta.

Martin's further plans include a week in Calcutta, after which he wants to go to Assam in the northeastern part of India. From Assam he hopes to either hike or travel horseback into Burma via the famous Ledo and Burma road. Going all through Burma, his projected itinerary takes him to Singapore and on through Java to fabulous Bali. He has not planned his route to Europe, but he should arrive in our former home town, Vienna, by July, and I expect to meet him there.

Gary Follows Old Family Trail

There should be a well-worn trail between a certain home near Castorland, New York, and Goshen College. Ralph S. Lehman blazed it in the fall of 1940, when he came to Goshen as a freshman. Sixteen years and four brothers and four sisters later came Gary 59, tenth of the children of Samuel and Clara (Kennell) Lehman to enter Goshen College.

Ralph x44 is now a psychiatric social worker at Portsmouth Receiving Hospital, Portsmouth, Ohio, working under the Ohio Department of Mental Hygiene. He is married and has two sons.

Elkanah (Ken) x46 was the next to come to Goshen. He is now a dairy farmer at Port Royal, Pa.

Claramae spent two years at Goshen and then went to La Junta Mennonite School of Nursing, La Junta, Colo. After receiving her R.N. there, she returned to Goshen for a B.S. in Nursing degree in 1952. She now lives in Gouverneur, New York, where her husband, Charles Klink, teaches industrial arts in the high school. They have one daughter.

Bernice x50, after a year at Goshen, went to La Junta with Claramae and received her R.N. in 1951. She is married to Dewey Hostetler, who is in the ready-mix concrete business at Harper, Kans. They have two children, a boy and a girl.

Curtis 53 married a Goshen girl, Jan Weaver, and lived in the Goshen community for a few years. At present he has his own hardware store near Lancaster, Pa. He has three children, all boys.

Lyle w49 is completing his first year as a graduate student in psychology at the University of Denver.

Dolores x53 received her R.N. from the La Junta school in 1953. She is married to Arnold Wedel, assistant professor of mathematics at Bethel College, North Newton, Kans. They have one daughter.

Jane 54 is living with her parents at Castorland and teaching school at West Leyden, New York.

Laverne (Jim) x57 is a junior at Bethel College, North Newton, Kans.

One brother and one sister did not attend Goshen College. Walter was graduated from Bethel College in 1950 and is farming at Newton, Kans. Eileen received her R.N. from the House of the Good Samaritan. Watertown, N.Y., and is now in charge of nursing services there. She is married to Jack Adams.

Conference at Bad Boll

The Kurhaus Bad Boll. built 350 years ago by a duke of Württemberg. South Germany, was the scene of an Oct. 6-9 European Mennonite Central Committee Workers' Conference. Among the 155 participants in the conference were a number of Goshen College alumni now in Pax and MCC service.

The goals of the conferences, according to an article by Daniel W. Miller 45, were "to think and worship . . . to question and answer and pray together . . . ."

Each of the principal addresses on the theme "Our Witness" was followed by time spent in smaller discussion groups. This audience participation revealed "serious evidence of Biblicism, evangelistic zeal, and mature churchmanship." Two of the major addresses were presented by Orley Swartzentruber 48, missionary to France, and Albert Meyer 50, MCC Director in France, on the subjects "What Is the Church?" and "Our MCC Message in Europe."

John Duerksen 37, Pax pastor, led evening devotions and directed the Pax Chorus; Milton Harder sem 53, MCC worker, participated in a report and introduction of the various Pax and MCC workers.

Other attendants at the conference included veteran MCC workers Mary Ellen Shoup x43 and Irene Bishop x47.

College Studies Agricultural Education

By James C. Snyder, fac. 1954-

Using the techniques of top-level industrial management, Goshen College recently sponsored a "brain storming" agricultural education conference. Leading agricultural educators and scientists, working in many different disciplines, dealt with the problem of an agricultural program for Goshen College. The program was planned by three faculty members: Glen R. Miller, chairman, G. F. Hershberger, and J. C. Snyder.

Visiting speakers participating in the conference were Victor H. Campbell, Department of Agriculture, Emmanuel Missionary College, Berrien Springs, Michigan; Roger Pennock, Jr., Department of Agriculture, Earlham College, Richmond, Indiana; William F. Brazziel, Jr., Department of Agriculture, Central State College, Wilberforce, Ohio; I. W. Moomaw, Executive Secretary, Agricultural Missions, Inc., New York, N.Y.; Paul Sacco, Recently Director of Agriculture at St. Ambrose College and the Diocese of Davenport, now Managing Director of York County Farm Produce Company, Rock Hill, South Carolina; John W. Hicks, Department of Agricultural Economics, and Executive Assistant to President Frederick L. Hovde of Purdue University, Lafayette, Indiana; Norman High, Director of Diploma Course, Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, Ontario; Frank Bishop, Extension Plant Pathologist and Entomologist, State of West Virginia, Morgantown, West Virginia; and Orie J. Eigsti, Department of Natural Sciences, Chicago Teachers College, Chicago, Illinois, and Director of Colchicine Research Foundation, Inc., Normal, Illinois.

It all started with Abe: Most of our agricultural education, research and extension is carried on by the federal and state departments of agriculture, working through the land grant colleges, experiment stations and similar state agencies. The mammoth program of today was not officially launched until the Lincoln Administration of 1862 established the U.S. Department of Agriculture and provided for the development of the land grant colleges. Since that time, state-sponsored activity in agriculture has been growing at a prodigious rate. Currently we have a whole army of dedicated agricultural scientists who are seeking to improve rural welfare and increase efficiency of both agricultural production and distribution.

Contrary to popular opinion, however, numerous non-land grant colleges and private institutions are also actively engaged in this same area. For example, a study by the National Association of College Teachers of Agriculture revealed that 94 non-land grant colleges offered four-year degree courses in agriculture. Of the non-land grant colleges offering agricultural education, a significant number were church related. It must be realized, however, that these programs are built upon foundations provided by state agencies.

The central theme and underlying purpose of all our activities at Goshen College is to foster and assist in the fourfold development of the student, thereby increasing the effectiveness of his Christian witness in his chosen vocation.

Limited resources have always been one of the major problems of church schools. The challenge facing our institution is one of allocating the resources at hand in the best possible manner. It is in this context that the various curricular alternatives must be considered. During the two day sessions, discussions centered on the following possibilities:

Two Year Practical—Course Content: Emphasis on agricultural arts such as animal and field husbandry. A minimum of the humanities. Designed to serve: (1) Prospective farm operators who cannot or do not desire to attend for four years. (2) Students who have not or cannot meet regular university entrance requirements. Resources Required: Relatively expensive if courses are worth while. All state institutions offering such courses draw heavily on the extensive physical plant and equipment of the land grant colleges and experiment stations. Sizable increases in faculty and physical plant necessary to implement program at Goshen.

Two Year General—Course Content: Similar to the present general education program now given at Goshen during the first two years. Some orientation of natural science subjects to agriculture. Several specific agriculture courses. Designed to Serve: (1) Prospective farm operators or those who will work largely in an agricultural context but cannot or do not desire to attend college for four years. (2) Students wishing to transfer to a land grant college for training in professional agriculture. Resources Required: Relatively inexpensive. Little additional physical plant or faculty required to implement program.

Four Year Specialized—Course Content: A wide variety of concentration areas based on the natural and social sciences. Most agricultural colleges have upwards of a dozen different departments ranging from engineering to economics. Designed to Serve: Prospective professional agricultural scientists. Resources Required: Very expensive. Marked expansion of present faculty and physical plant would be required.

Four Year General—Course Content: Similar to four year liberal arts program now offered at Goshen. Some orientation of natural science subjects to agriculture. Several specific agriculture courses. Designed to Serve: (1) Prospective farm operators or those who work largely in an agricultural context—including rural ministers and foreign missionaries. (2) Students wishing to do graduate work in professional agriculture. Resources Required: Relatively inexpensive. Little additional physical plant or faculty required to implement program.

Extension Programs—Possibility of co-ordinating Goshen College activities with existing extension services and local industries. Reasonable cost. Would depend largely on ingenuity of director.

To successfully implement a program of agricultural education at Goshen College we need to move cautiously, explore all approaches, and maintain a flexible curriculum. Various combinations of the above suggested curricula might be necessary to meet student needs. We also need a cultural appreciation and fuller understanding of the fundamental position of agriculture in world economy both on faculty and student levels.

For Every Brick, Another Brick

The Corporate Alumnus Program of the General Electric Educational and Charitable Fund has broadened its program, so that any person who has been a regular full-time student at Goshen College for at least one year may make his contribution to an approved alumni fund count double.

Established in November, 1954, the Corporate Alumnus Program offered to match gifts of its regular employees in 1955 to approved alumni programs of institutions from which they had received degrees. The trustees of the Fund report that the 1955 Program was quite successful, with approximately 5,300 employees making gifts to nearly 360 colleges, totaling nearly $200,000. The over-all average gift was nearly twice what they had anticipated from preliminary surveys of employee giving. Interpreting this increase as due to the stimulus of their program, they are making it possible for more employees to participate in the program, with the hope that 1956 will see "substantial increases in participation, average gift, and the number of institutions benefiting."

In order for Goshen College to benefit from the Corporate Alumnus Program, it is necessary for the General Electric Employee to submit certain information with his gift on forms provided by the company. The details of the plan and copies of the form should be secured from Leland A. Bachman, business manager of Goshen College.

To the best of our knowledge, Goshen College had only one alumnus who met the qualifications of the 1955 Corporate Alumnus Program, and we had 100% participation. With the broadening of the program to include persons who attended Goshen College for one year, the number of persons eligible to participate is increased. We lay upon every alumnus in General Electric employ the privilege and responsibility of participating in a program, whereby his gift up to $1,000.00 will be matched by the company in 1956. Such contributions will be credited to the Goshen College building program. For every brick you furnish, another will be available.

The Complete Writings of Menno Simons, translated from the Dutch by Leonard Verduin and edited by John Christian Wenger, with a biography by Harold S. Bender; Scottdale, Pa., Herald Press, 1956; 1092 pp.; $8.75.

On the four hundred twentieth anniversary of the conversion of Menno Simons, Herald Press published a new English translation of his complete writings. The previous English translation of 1871 had been out of print for many years.

Menno Simons was a native of Friesland and wrote in Dutch or in the Oostersche dialect of the region of North Germany where he lived for a number of years. Since the 1871 edition had been translated in part from German translations of some of Menno's works and in part from the Dutch by persons who were not trained historical scholars, the Mennonite Publication Board authorized a completely new translation from the original languages. They secured the services of Leonard Verduin, a Dutch Reformed minister of Ann Arbor, Mich., whose theological training and his knowledge of the Dutch language qualified him for the task. He worked closely with John C. Wenger, who edited the translation, providing introductions for the individual works.

While Menno Simons did not found the Mennonite Church, he was one of the prominent leaders in the Dutch Anabaptist movement. In a period when thousands of Anabaptists were dying as martyrs, Menno lived to guide his brethren for twenty-five years. The influence which he exerted and the close similarity between most of his doctrines and those of the various Anabaptist groups in the Netherlands, Germany, and Switzerland led to the appellation Mennist and its derivative Mennonite, which now designates descendants of these groups. Since Menno was a fugitive during most of his ministry, he sometimes had to resort to his pen to answer his opponents and to give spiritual encouragement to his followers. The Mennonite Church has never considered the writings of Menno as infallible. Indeed, some of his doctrines sound very foreign to Mennonites today. Yet in many respects Mennonites still teach the doctrine which Menno taught.

The new edition contains all of the known writings of Menno, including several letters and hymns which are not to be found in previous editions of his works. Wenger's introductions to each book, tract, letter, and hymn are most helpful in relating Menno's writings to each other and in orienting the reader in the historical background out of which each one arose. The translation, attempting to preserve the style of the original, is smooth and well done.

To supplement the writings, the publishers have included a brief biography of Menno Simons by H. S. Bender. There is an extensive index. While there is a table to indicate the location of the various writings in different editions of the complete works, the research scholar would probably have appreciated a complete bibliography of all of the Menno Simons imprints, with a list of the more important biographical sketches of the man. Although the book contains 1,092 pages, the publishers have provided a book of convenient size without sacrificing quality of paper or size of type. The dark blue binding has a dignity in keeping with the character of the book.

The book should be of interest to every Mennonite. The student of church history and the theologian will find it of value in that it represents the work of one of three early Anabaptist leaders who left extensive writings, reflecting such Anabaptist emphases as the new birth, complete commitment to Christ, the centrality of the New Testament for Christian doctrine, and the principle of religious freedom. It is of interest to alumni in that J. C. Wenger and H. S. Bender are both graduates of Goshen College and members of the Goshen College Biblical Seminary faculty.

J. B. Smith

Greek-English Concordance to the New Testament, a tabular and statistical Greek-English concordance based on the King James version with an English-to-Greek index, by J. B. Smith; Scottdale, Pa., Herald Press, 1955; 430 pp.; $12.75.

The abundance of versions of the Bible available today serves to emphasize the fact that no one translation into the English language gives us the exact sense of our Scriptures as they were originally written. Some from among us have had the opportunity to study New Testament Greek, but they have only made a beginning. They are in no sense scholars of the language, able to interpret the fine distinctions of declension, inflection, and syntax. The most they can do is to follow with a bit more comprehension the commentaries and other theological works which have frequent references to the Greek. In their work as ministers, or as lay workers, and in their devotional study of the Bible they, too, have many occasions to wonder about the meaning of a given word, its comparative use in various parts of the New Testament, and the frequency of its use.

J. B. Smith's Greek-English Concordance to the New Testament is designed to provide just this sort of help for the lay student of the New Testament. Smith lists in alphabetical order every word in the Greek New Testament (Textus Receptus) with the various translations as they are found in the King James version. He presents this material in tabular form with every occurrence of the use of the word and a given translation in one column, while other occurrences and translations are shown in parallel columns. This is the approach from the Greek word. To make his concordance useful to the student who knows English only, Smith prepared an index which lists the English words, giving the location in the concordance of the Greek word from which it was translated with the frequency of occurrence.

The concordance has received high praise from New Testament scholars. Bruce M. Metzger of Princeton Theological Seminary has written the introduction, and others have attested to its accuracy and usefulness. Compared with other well-known concordances, it has been declared superior.

J. B. Smith was a man peculiarly endowed for a work such as this. His mastery of Biblical languages combined with a love for tabulation and sustained by the patience to stick with a job through long years of toil enabled him to complete a colossal task. He did not live to see his work in published form. He had completed the manuscript before his death in 1951, but the task of publication was so great that the publishers were unable to release the book until December of 1955.

J. B. Smith was one of the early students at Elkhart Institute. Later he attended Ohio Northern University, Ada, Ohio; Oskaloosa College, Oskaloosa, Iowa; Temple University, Philadelphia, Pa.; and the Evangelical Theological Seminary, Naperville, Ill. At Naperville he had completed requirements for the S.T.D. degree in Hebrew and Greek. He taught at Hesston College and Bible School and at Eastern Mennonite School and served as vice-president of the Mennonite Board of Education from 1934 to 1944. Three of his children are Goshen College alumni: Beulah 23, George a28, and J. Harold 32. J. Harold served on the Goshen College faculty from 1949 to 1954.

The publication of the concordance was a new venture for Herald Press. With its 382 pages of tabular material, it could not be handled with regular linotype machines. Instead, the master copy was prepared with a special electric typewriter, and the book was produced by photolithoprint. It was a major publication venture, and its successful completion deserves a word of special commendation to those who worked with the technical processes of editing and publication, as well as tribute to the compiler. Dorothy C. Kemrer 25, associate professor of Latin and New Testament Greek at Eastern Mennonite College, gave special editorial assistance in the preparation of the manuscript for printing. nps

Robert Stetter, Jr. 56 has been appointed pastor of the Worton, Md., Mennonite Church. After the completion of the present school year, he plans to teach in the area.

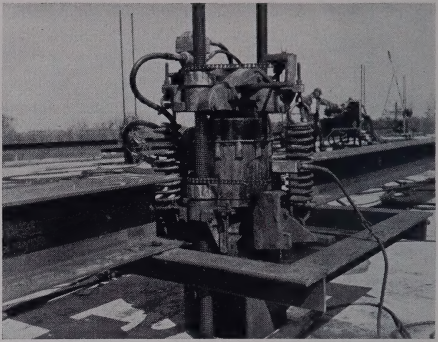
Commencement Plans

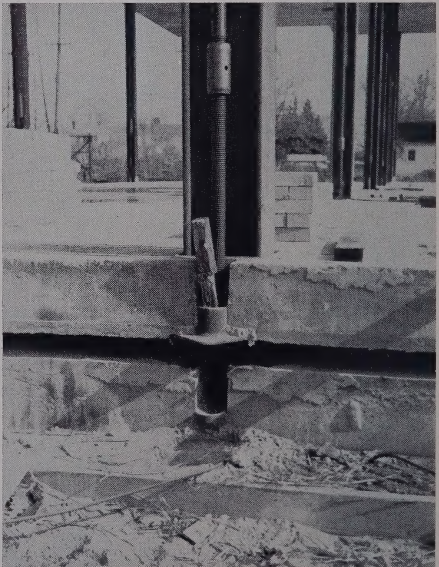
On the back cover you will find the calendar of commencement activities. This year a major change in scheduling places the seminary class program on the Sunday preceding Baccalaureate Sunday at the time of the regular College Mennonite Church Sunday evening service. For a time the seminary class had its program on Thursday evening at the end of the last day of final exams. Then it was moved to Friday evening, the day of class outings. The activities of both of these days were scarcely the kind to put students in the mood to attend a serious program in the evening. Few parents of the members of the seminary class came early enough to attend the program. It is hoped that the new place on the calendar will encourage more general attendance by college students and make this event more meaningful to the seminary class and their fellow students. There will be a guest speaker for this service—another change from the pattern of previous years. The speaker for the commencement program this year will be Dr. Wilhelm Pauck, Professor of Church History at Union Theological Seminary in New York, formerly at the University of Chicago.



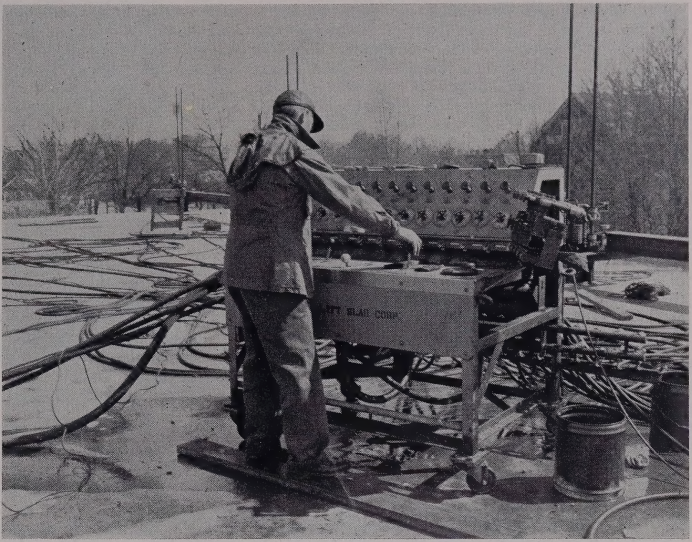
The compression chamber has been raised and heavy brass nuts have been turned on the threaded lifting rods at the base of the unit. When the pressure has been released and the chamber lowered again, the nuts at the top of the unit will be drawn tight for another hitch.

Skyhook Raises the Roof

Practical joking to the contrary, there is a skyhook, and it is playing a big role in the construction of two new buildings on the Goshen College campus. When Orus Eash a x38, architect, planned the Nurses' Dormitory and the Arts Building, he recommended a type of construction which has been used rather extensively in southwestern states in recent years. We've tried to explain it to you a bit in earlier reports on these buildings.



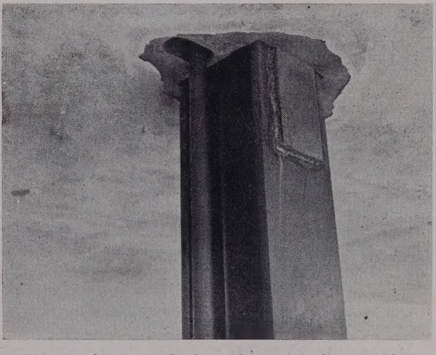
With two slabs in place, the "skyhook" begins to raise the third slab. The fourth slab remains to be lifted from the fifth and lowest slab.



The control unit has ridden the first slab to the top of the building. The large hoses to the left are the supply lines from the compression unit, while the swarm of hoses and wires leading away from the back of the unit lead to the individual hoists at the top of each of twelve posts.

Throughout the winter the concrete slabs which will form the various floors and the roof of the Nurses' Dormitory have been lying one on top of the other in what appeared to be a solid concrete platform about four feet thick, with twelve bare steel beams jutting into the sky above it. Monday morning, April 16, the Skyhook Lift Slab Corporation's red semitrailer, with crane attached to the tractor, pulled into the area beside the dormitory. I-W men Merle Sears and Dick Springer of the campus maintenance department helped the driver unload ten hydraulic hoisting units, the big compressor, the control unit, and the connecting hoses, all of which combine with another semitrailer load of equipment to form the "skyhook." Monday morning, April 23, the truck was back again. Then the work of assembling the various units of equipment began. Hoisting units were mounted on platforms which fit on the top of the steel columns. Two heavy, threaded steel rods were attached to each of these units. When the hoists had been mounted on the beams, the bottom end of each rod was attached to the steel collars embedded in the concrete around each beam. With everything in readiness, the compressor went into action, valves were opened, hoses stiffened. The Skyhook Lift Slab Corporation was literally "raising the roof" at Goshen College.

Once the "skyhook" got going, the job wasn't completed for several weeks. There was no sudden "poof," and the roof was in place. Inch by inch, with hardly perceptible motion, the slab eased upward for several days. It was something like a pop concert under the open sky. People in the community, both campus folks and the townspeople, had been saying, "That's something I want to see." So there was usually an audience. The concert artist worked at a console with three or four stops and several banks of gauges, from which hoses and wires led to the individual hoisting units atop each beam. As the slab rose, the maestro could tell just how much pressure was being applied at each point and just how much the slab was rising. When the slab reached its destined height, new instruments came into play to weld the steel collars to the beams. Then the rods were lowered again, attached to the next slab, and the process was repeated. By the time the Newsletter came from the press, the last slab should have been in place. And those of you who come to commencement will no doubt find that a swarm of masons, carpenters, and other construction men will have made substantial progress in putting flesh on this skeleton.



With the slab in its final position, steel plates welded to the posts hold it permanently in place. Through the jagged hole in the concrete, part of the steel bracket embedded in the slab can be seen. The lifting rods have been dropped to the next slab, and the lifting process will continue.

Olive Wyse Tours Southland

Olive Wyse 26, on leave from the faculty during the second semester, spent a month traveling through the south with a former Wayland, Iowa, neighbor, Grace Augsburger 49, now of La Junta, Colo., as a traveling companion. Leaving Wayland March 10, the two drove south into Arkansas and spent the night with Ada Clemens 55 at Buffalo, where Ada teaches in the Mountain View Christian Day School. The next afternoon they drove on to Culp, Ark., where they were guests of Erma Grove 48 and Margaret Ulrich 39 in their apartment on the second floor of the Bethel Springs Mennonite School building. That evening a group of thirteen alumni and their families gathered in the adjoining apartment of Carl 55 and Doris (Gunden) 49 Metzler for a carry-in supper. The next morning both Olive and Grace spoke in a conjoint chapel service for grade- and high-school students in the Bethel Springs school. Margaret Ulrich teaches grades 1 to 3 in the school, and Fred Meyer 55 teaches grades 4 to 6, while Erma Grove, Kenneth Long 54, and Carl Metzler teach in the high school, with Carl as principal. Before leaving Arkansas, they visited Merle Grasse 44 in his clinic at Calico Rock, Ark.

Continuing south, Olive and Grace visited Gulfport, Miss., where Edith Zehr 52 and Willard Ebersole 54 teach Bible courses and lead recreational activities in schools for colored children as part of the program of MCC Camp Landon. The remainder of their trip was less alumni-centered. Traveling east as far as Sarasota, Fla., and then north, they spent Easter at Winston-Salem, N.C., witnessing the Moravian sunrise service there. Another major stop was Harrisonburg, Va., where they visited with alumni again on the campus of Eastern Mennonite College. The westward lap of their journey brought them to Lincoln's Springfield, Ill., home and restored New Salem, which Olive considers an appropriate climax to their southern trip, "For it would certainly be a pity if the southern states were not a part of the Union." Returning to Wayland, the two parted company. Before coming back to Goshen, Olive visited Iowa Mennonite School at Kalona, Iowa, where a number of alumni are teaching.

Olive is spending part of her time in Goshen revising her course outlines and dreaming dreams about the development of the new quarters for the Home Economics department on the first floor of the Arts Building. In her tentative plans for late spring and early summer is a trip to Europe with Viola Good 39, college Dean of Women.

Roy Umble Receives Fulbright

Following close on the heels of Samuel A. Yoder 28, Professor of English, Roy Umble 35, Professor of Speech, plans to travel to Greece under the International Educational Exchange Program of the U.S. Department of State. Beginning July 9, Roy will spend six weeks this summer at the University of Michigan in a workshop on the teaching of English as a foreign language. His wife, the former Ferne Smith 33, and their two daughters, Janet and Alice, will accompany him to Greece in late August.

Faculty Families Build Houses

Two faculty families have begun construction of new homes in the larger campus neighborhood. Atlee 34 and Winifred (Nelson) 38 Beechy have begun a six-room slab house on River Vista Drive. That's the road to the college cabin, or the first turn to the right after you have passed the H. S. Bender home on S.R. 15, going south. Earl Schwartzentruber 57 is Atlee's head carpenter. The Beechy house will be the fourth along this street where there were no houses at all a few years ago.

Dwight 40 and Marjorie (Conrad) 40 Weldy are looking away from the noise and traffic of South Main Street to the quiet of the outskirts of the city. They are building a one and one-half story, six-room house beside the home Chester 50 and Geraldine (Landis) 53 Raber erected last year south of College Avenue on what will probably be designated as an extension of South Thirteenth Street. Cornelius Miller, the contractor, had the structure under roof April 23. Dwight will not be teaching during the summer and will be helping with the construction.

The Year in Macedonia

As I was saying when I was interrupted (September, 1954), it is difficult to work out subtile schemes to shake down the alumni for a few more dollars, and at the same time to enjoy the sublimity of Homer and Dante and Shakespeare. And if a person has to choose, it seems evident that a lyric feast of the finer things of life is to be preferred to the calculated materialism of dollars and cents. That is to say, a diet of plain living and high thinking is better than one of fancy living and low thinking.

Hence your unworthy ex-editor finds himself—of all places—in Greece, the home of Homer, the cradle of the West, and the birthplace of the humanities. I have often read Aristotle, but here I see him in the flesh daily. (He's a good average student, about a B.) I have climbed Mt. Olympus in the company of Sophocles himself—who strangely enough has not developed any noticeable Oedipus complex, nor got involved in any kind of tragic nemesis, but is a more or less normal fourth-form boy, son of a local tobacco merchant, who chatters an awful lot. The only abnormal thing about him is that his chattering is done mostly in an unintelligible lingo known as Greek. But that is a most common phenomenon in these parts, even among youngsters. Anyway it's Greek to me!

As for Father Zeus feasting on Mt. Olympus—well, he can have it. It's a tough climb, and once you are there it's cold and disagreeable. I'm not surprised that those gods quarreled a good bit. The climate up there is not conducive to the cultivation of harmonious family living—"sharing" is the ancient Greek term literally translated. Zeus should have called on his psychiatrist. Anyone can see that the least he owed Hera in the interests of domestic felicity was automatic, thermostatically controlled, central heating. While it is evident that they did have a marvelous view out the picture window of their living room, yet one can't live on scenery. It's no wonder that Hera and the in-laws got mad at him sometimes.

Incidentally, Greece at the moment (Saturday, March 17, 9 a.m.) is about as full of ruinous wrath about the abduction of Archbishop Makarios from Cyprus by the British as it was several years ago at the abduction of Helen of Troy from Menelaus by Paris. Though vastly different in appearance, both faces seem equally able "to launch a thousand ships!" It isn't exactly the best atmosphere in which to absorb the sublimity of Homer. But then someone is always abducting someone or something, and if one is ever going to enjoy any kind of homer at all, this is just as good a place as is a grandstand seat in the Yankee stadium at the World Series—just so one stays off the streets of Thessalonica when the rioters get going. St. Paul and Silas and Jason could have told us about that too, some time ago (see Acts 17:5-9).

In case you are beginning to wonder what I'm writing about, this is it: Last September Mrs. Yoder, Elaine, and I came to Anatolia College at Thessalonica, Greece, where I am teaching for a year on a Fulbright appointment. We've enjoyed Athens, the Acropolis, Corinth, Philippi, Constantinople, Thessalonica, and the beautiful Greek countryside. We are at present planning an Easter tour through Turkey (via Smyrna, Ephesus, Antioch, etc.) to Palestine, and back via Cyprus and the Mediterranean. During the summer we plan to return (with our other daughter, Phyllis, now a student nurse at G.C.) in our Volkswagen, sailing for New York from Southampton, England. Hope it all works out.

As to my work here, the teaching of English as a foreign language to groups of wiry young Greeks whose favorite sport is pulling the professor's leg is an education in itself. It's all so different and exciting that one hardly knows where to begin. Maybe I can tell you about it later on. Besides this we enjoy making our home a kind of headquarters for the Pax boys in Greece; we enjoy their occasional visits.

Meanwhile God bless you all. It is good to travel and learn new things—but it is better to have a home and friends to think of and to come back to.

Alumni Directors Meet

Saturday evening, April 14, the Board of Directors of the Alumni Association met to elect directors and officers, to plan the annual banquet, and to hear reports from the president of the college.

In the election Leland Bachman 38, Goshen, Ind.; Harold H. Good 48, Waterloo, Ont.; Lloyd Hartzler 36, Elkhart, Ind.; Mahlon O. Krabill 22, Louisville, Ohio; and Olive Wyse 26, Goshen, were elected to a three-year term as directors. A sixth director is to be elected by the graduating class. With one exception, the officers were re-elected. The office of second vice-president is usually assigned to some person who is in foreign missionary service and will be on furlough during the coming year. Quintus Leatherman 27, Mennonite missionary in London, England, has been elected to this position in the place of Ralph Buckwalter 48, who returns to Japan.

The annual alumni banquet is again planned for Saturday evening of commencement week. This year the forty-year, twenty-five-year, and ten-year classes will be honored in the program.

In his report to the directors President Mininger reported that alumni donations to the college to date this year have been $15,700.00, as compared with $13,752.00 a year ago. When he suggested that Goshen College take out membership in the American Alumni Association in order that we might benefit from the experience of other schools in the organization as we develop our alumni relations program, the alumni directors recommended that the college do so. The directors also concurred with the college administration in the appointment of Virgil Vogt 54, Akron, Pa., as editor of the Alumni Newsletter and Director of Alumni Relations. Virgil is at present assistant director of I-W relations under MCC. He plans to come to Goshen in September to take part-time work in the seminary and to give half time to alumni work. The directors expressed the opinion that half time was a minimum assignment for the total work of alumni relations. President Mininger also raised the question of the feasibilty of an Alumni Consultation Day, when he would sit for a day with the Board of Directors of the Alumni Association and possibly other alumni to discuss pertinent questions related to the operation of the college. The directors enthusiastically supported the idea, recommending the day before Thanksgiving as a possible date for such a consultation.

Intercollegiate Peace Group, 1906-1956

By John S. Umble 05, fac 04-05, 25-51, Professor Emeritus of English and Speech

The Indiana Intercollegiate Peace Speech Association celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of the first peace oratorical contest on the Goshen College campus on Friday afternoon and evening, April 20. Features of the celebration were an address by Howard C. Morgan, of Capital University, Columbus, Ohio, chairman of the national association; the reading of a letter written to the state association by N. E. Byers, of Decatur, Ga., former president of Goshen College and chief promoter of the founding of the Intercollegiate Peace Association in 1905; and the presence of Mr. and Mrs. Amos W. Geigley 13 to present in person the two hundred dollars in prizes which they annually donate to the association.

Dr. Morgan outlined the progress, development, and vicissitudes of the association from its beginning to the present time. The colleges which responded in June, 1905, to the invitation of President Byers to an organizational meeting were Goshen, Earlham, Juniata, Penn, Ashland, and Wilmington, and Friends University. The conference elected the following officers to serve for the next year: Professor Elbert Russel, of Earlham College, chairman, with President I. Harvey Brumbaugh, of Juniata and President Noah E. Byers, of Goshen.

The conference adopted the name "The Intercollegiate Peace Association" and stated as its purpose, "To promote peace and arbitration through educational institutions, especially colleges and universities." The Goshen College Record in reporting the meeting stated, "The delegates present favored the holding of an intercollegiate oratorical contest on peace subjects in connection with next year's conference and the committee has the question under consideration." Earlham College extended an invitation to hold the 1906 conference on the Earlham campus.

During the next year the committee decided to hold a peace oratorical contest and issued invitations to the member colleges and others to enter contestants. Five Goshen students expressed an intention to enter the local contest, two Auroras and three C.M.A.'s (now Adelphians), but the C.M.A. column in the College Record proudly states that all of the three contestants were C.M.A.'s: W. W. Oesch 10, C. D. Esch 06, and H. B. Reed 07. Reed won the local contest and the ten-dollar prize with his oration, "Tolstoi as a Peace Character." Oesch, speaking on "A True Remedy for War," was runner-up. Both orations were printed in the Goshen College Record.

The association held its second meeting at Earlham College in 1906. Outstanding leaders in the peace colleges delivered suitable addresses, and President Byers led a "Conference of Delegates" on the subject, "How Organize the Schools to Promote the Peace Movement?"

Dr. Morgan's account of the association's subsequent history and the present extent of its activities held the attention of his Goshen audience. Thousands of students have prepared and delivered orations on some phase of the peace question. At first only men engaged in these contests, later both men and women. In 1946, in line with current trends in public speaking, the extempore address was added to the program. At the present time most of the state organizations sponsor four contests: oratory for men and oratory for women; extempore speaking for men and extempore speaking for women. In the latter contests students draw subjects from a fairly long list of topics previously announced. A few states combine the contests for men and women.

Each winner of a state contest is eligible to compete in the national. Judging of the national contest in extempore speaking is based on a tape recording of the speech at the time of delivery. Students competing in oratory submit both a manuscript and a tape recording.

The Ohio Council of Churches makes interesting use of winning manuscripts used in the state peace oratorical contests. Each year they select twelve or more orations and print them in pamphlet form to be used in the Ohio Prince of Peace Declamation Contest. Hundreds of high-school students study these orations, commit their selections to memory, and recite them before audiences aggregating thousands.

In the fiftieth anniversary celebration on the Goshen campus on the evening of April 20, the audience listened with sympathetic interest to the reading of a letter from former president N. E. Byers, in which he narrated the story of the founding of the association. His letter appears elsewhere in this issue.

Twenty-three students from eight Indiana colleges and universities participated in the four contests held on the Goshen campus in connection with the anniversary celebration. First place winners in Men's and Women's Oratory were from Earlham College and Butler University; and in Men's and Women's Extempore Speaking, from Manchester College and Saint Mary-of-the-Woods College. Goshen contestants placing among the winners were Frances Stieglitz 57, of Milford, Ind., in Women's Oratory, and Richard Camp 58, of St. Paul, Minn., in Men's Extempore. The best record by the squad from any one school was that made by Butler University, coached by N. M. (Mac) Cripe 49, who won first during his student days at Goshen College. Members of his squad placed in every event.

Prizes for the contests, twenty-five dollars for first place, fifteen for second, and ten for third in each of the four events, are the annual gift of A. W. Geigley. An outstanding feature of the fiftieth anniversary celebration was his personal presentation of the prizes to the thirteen winners. (In Men's Extempore two men were tied for third place.) Mr. Geigley congratulated the winners and spoke with feeling of the high moral, intellectual, and spiritual value of such public speaking contests both to the contestants and to their audiences.

Intercollegiate Peace Speech Association

Dear Friends:

I appreciate very much your invitation to participate in the celebration of the Golden Anniversary of your Association. I would certainly enjoy meeting some of the people who have been keeping this work going for fifty years, and hearing the program and contests, but distance prevents me from being present, and so this brief message must suffice.

At any rate, I think those who build an organization, meet its problems, and persevere, in spite of difficulties, to keep it going deserve more honor than those who merely started it. We probably do honor George Washington most of all United States presidents, but perhaps others, such as Abe Lincoln, deserve more recognition, and even those who work long and hard and do not reach the highest position, such as Blaine, Bryan, Taft, Dewey, and probably Stevenson, also should be given consideration.

The idea of an intercollegiate peace organization had its origin at the dinner table in our home. Dr. C. H. Smith lived with us at that time, and, as both of us were interested in the cause of peace, we raised the question as to what a college of a historic peace church should do to interest students in this subject. Students coming to us from the public schools are successfully indoctrinated in a type of militaristic patriotism not in harmony with our ideals and Christian principles. We thought the church colleges should try to do for the church what the public schools do for the state. So we suggested that the Goshen College faculty call a conference of representatives of the colleges of the historic peace churches to discuss methods of promoting the cause of peace in the colleges.

This conference was held in the spring of 1906 and the program consisted of addresses by representatives of the college faculties on the general subject of "Education for Peace." I do not remember that the idea of oratorical contests was considered at that meeting. The chief result of this conference was the organization of the Intercollegiate Peace Association, and the decision to invite all the colleges of Indiana and Ohio to become members. Professor Elbert Russell of Earlham College was elected president, and Earlham College was selected as the place for the meeting the following year.

The plan of having oratorical contests a phase of the work of the Association was suggested to me by the fact that about ten years earlier I had attended a national collegiate oratorical contest of a prohibition organization on Staten Island, New York. A friend of mine, a student at Hillsdale College who had won the Michigan state contest, invited me to take the trip to New York with him. He had chosen a peace subject for this oration, and it was finally accepted because it met the requirement that subjects should be chosen supporting a plank of the platform of the Prohibition Party. International Peace was one of the planks. He won a prize of $50. As we were in need of cash for our trip, I had good reason to be enthusiastic about his success. This was perhaps the first prize oration on the subject of peace.

Noah E. Byers, College President, 1903-13

It was obvious that this was an effective way to promote the cause of peace. A large number of students would engage in studying the subject, books would be added to libraries, coaches would be required to inform themselves, audiences would hear good speeches, and effective speakers would be trained. I had one testimonial to support this conclusion. The Professor of Speech at Wabash College wrote me a letter saying that he had not been interested in the subject before he helped the students, and it opened up a new field of thought and interest for him. He thought that perhaps I had accomplished as much by helping to start this organization as I could do by being President of Goshen College.

However, the organization did not end war. On the contrary, war stopped the contests for a time. In Ohio after the First World War began, it was found that Bluffton College was the only college that desired to hold the state contest. The subject of the winning oration was "Win the War to End All War." Well, we lost that battle but I hope we did not lose the war for peace.

After the close of the war, at a conference of the Historic Peace Churches at Bluffton College, the organization was revived by the appointment of Professor Payson Miller, then on the Bluffton College faculty, as secretary to make plans for continuing the oratorical contests.

It is very gratifying that men have been found to continue the work in spite of "wars and rumors of wars" during much of this half century, and to re-

Peace Was the Theme

by Hans Wiehler 54

Someone figured out that that mysterious word "peace" probably was uttered well over 1300 times this last week end of April 19-22 on our G.C. campus. Therein we seemed to follow the trend of our time—but what did we accomplish? And yet, the peace issue today appears to be more than just fashionable cheap talk. Was it only a strange coincidence that our Alma Mater was host to three week-end meetings, each one of a different nature, but all grappling with the same problem—Peace?

Forty-eight delegates from seven Mennonite and affiliated colleges flocked together for the seventh annual Mennonite Intercollegiate Peace Fellowship. With this year's theme "The Christian Pacifist in Society" we tried to find a solution to the acute problem of continued and more constructive social involvment on the one hand, or a radical separation from the present social order on the other. What is the relationship of nonresistant Christians to present-day dynamic and complex society? There were speeches by Donovan Smucker, Chicago, Robert S. Kreider, Bluffton, and Lawrence Burkholder, Goshen. There were two panel discussions —helpful, clarifying, as well as complicating. The basic problem was not solved—as a group of Christian pacifists, we still did not see our way clearly. But even so, this was not lost time. The experience of struggling together with the issues was fruitful —maybe the most profitable thing of the whole conference—perhaps pointing to the solution. If the answer lies in this direction, will we ever have sufficient time for each other and our burning problems? Our time together proved to be too short. The Indiana Peace Oratorical Contest held in chapel hall on Friday night was a short and welcome interlude.

The Tenth Annual International Student Conference of Mennonite and Affiliated Colleges in the United States had "Things Which Make for Peace" as its conference theme. Very likely this was the largest conference so far, with 69 participants plus a number of G.C. students and faculty members. At the beginning we had to ask ourselves: How can members of 21 different nations of this world, with diverse backgrounds, experiences, opinions, and even religions (there were five Mohammedans with us), get together on such a difficult topic? We did. Most worth while throughout the conference proved the small discussion groups and the many private conversations. Stimulating were the addresses by Lawrence Burkholder, J. E. Hartzler, and Fu Sheng Chen.

But again, what probably was of deepest value to us international students, was not so much the attempt to solve the international problems of peace, and our pooling of information and experiences, as well as obtaining new insights and more complete views—but rather the fact of our getting together in itself was the most concrete thing, we found, which makes for peace. We actually tried to listen to each other (no longer preoccupied with our own petty ideas), tried to understand one another more than to be understood, to love the other more than to be loved. We found that attitudes count more than words and ideas. After all, what else is peace?

Ohio Alumni Meet

The Northeastern Ohio Goshen Alumni Dinner was held at the Smithville High School, March 16, during the worst snowstorm of the year, according to retiring president Vernon Meyer 49. Of the one hundred persons who had made reservations for the dinner, thirty-five were kept away by poor driving conditions. However, those who were able to attend enjoyed an informative report by Dean Harold S. Bender on the program and growth of the seminary.

New alumni officers elected are John Liechty 42, president; M. O. Krabill 22, vice-president; Helen (Snyder) Reusser 48, secretary; and Anna M. (Shirey) Yoder 45, treasurer. Retiring officers in addition to Vernon Meyer are John Liechty, vice-president; Melinda (Jost) Hooley 49, secretary; and George Amstutz 42, treasurer.

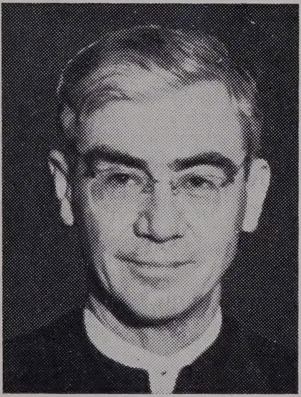
New Faculty Appointments

Coming to Goshen College as Director of Agricultural Education Study and Professor of Agriculture, C. Franklin Bishop has the challenging task of developing a new department in the college curriculum. Frank is a native of eastern Pennsylvania. He received his B.A. degree from Goshen College in 1940. During all four of his student years he was a member of A Cappella Chorus. Except for his junior year, when he was editor of the Maple Leaf, he was also a member of an organized quartet. In intramural sports he was a member of class and literary society basketball and softball teams. Upon his graduation from Goshen College, he entered West Virginia University, receiving his M.S. there in 1942 and his Ph.D. in 1948. From 1944 to the present he has been serving as Extension Specialist in Plant Pathology and Etymology under the West Virginia Agriculture Education Service. Photography is one of his hobbies, and he develops his own pictures. As an active participant in the Agriculture Education Conference on the campus here in March, Frank received a good orientation in the problems which will face him as he studies the role of agriculture education in the program of Goshen College. He is married to Suzanne Harnish x43, formerly of Eureka, Ill., and they have four sons, David, 11; John, 8; Larry, 5; and Bruce, 1½.

C. Franklin Bishop



J. D. Graber

Joseph D. Graber of Elkhart, Ind., has been appointed Assistant Professor of Missions in the Goshen College Biblical Seminary, succeeding John H. Mosemann, who has been called to the full-time pastorate of the Goshen College Mennonite Church and will teach a maximum of one course in the seminary each semester as Lecturer in Missions. A graduate of the Hesston College Academy, Graber took his first three years of college there, coming to Goshen in the fall of 1924 and receiving his B.A. here the following spring. During his year here he was president of the Y.P.C.A., sang in the chorus, was editor of the Record, and engaged in other campus activities. Following his graduation from college, he was married to the former Minnie Swartzendruber 44, a fellow Iowan, and together they spent three terms with the American Mennonite Mission in India. During his first furlough he enrolled at Princeton Theological Seminary, completing work there for the Th.B. degree in 1943 at the end of a second India term. Since 1944 he has been secretary of the Mennonite Board of Missions and Charities and has lived in Elkhart. During this period he has been a frequent visitor to the Goshen College campus, inspiring students and faculty alike with the warmth of his personality, his devotion to Christ, and his vision for enlisting young people in the work of the church. Alumni, too, saw and heard him frequently, for he has traveled widely throughout Mennonite communities in the United States and Canada, and occasionally abroad. He serves as bishop of the Prairie Street and Roselawn Mennonite churches in Elkhart and of the Ninth Street Mennonite Church in Saginaw, Mich. At present he is taking further graduate work at Kennedy School of Missions, Hartford, Conn. He has two children, Ronald 52, a senior in the Northwestern University School of Medicine, and Eleanor 57. Coming to Goshen with firsthand experience in foreign missionary work and the broader acquaintance with the total mission effort of the Mennonite Church which the past years have given him, he is well qualified to co-ordinate the mission courses of the seminary to the program of our various mission boards. He will continue to give half time to the Mission Board.

Goshen College is sometimes accused of too much inbreeding in her faculty. Of seventy-four persons listed on the faculty and administrative staff in last year's catalog, sixty-three had been students, if not graduates, of Goshen College. Martin H. Schrag comes to the faculty with a minimum of Goshen College experience—a few months in the summer of 1943, when he was a member of the MCC Relief Training School conducted on our campus. He received his B.A. from Bethel College, North Newton, Kans., in 1942, and his B.D. from Mennonite Biblical Seminary in Chicago in 1953, and has done further graduate study at Temple University and at Eastern Baptist Theological Seminary, where he is at present candidate for the Th.M. degree. While a senior in high school at Moundridge, Kans., he was chosen as an all-conference football guard. Among other activities as a student at Bethel College, he was a member of the Student Christian Movement cabinet, president of the senior class, treasurer of the Student Council, member of the Men's Governing Council, president of the Letter Club, sports editor of the Bethel Collegian, organizations editor of the Graymaroon, and a member of the choir. At Mennonite Biblical Seminary his practical work assignment included children's work in the Woodlawn community adjacent to the seminary. During his CPS experience he became acquainted with many alumni as he moved from Hill City, S. Dak., to Lapine, Oreg., to Goshen, to Ypsilanti, Mich., to Fort Collins, Colo., to Warner, N.H., to Bowie, Md. Following CPS he spent a three-year term with MCC in India. For the past two years he has been Instructor in Bible and Language at Messiah College. He comes to Goshen as Assistant Professor in Bible and is scheduled to teach courses in Bible and Christian Education on the undergraduate level. He is married to Dorothy Witter, formerly of Navarre, Kans., sister to Paul Witter 48.

Albert had been with us here several times before, and there is a group of friends interested in the testimony of nonresistance, which is so vitally given to us by our Mennonite friends. At this retreat, however, on Feb. 28 to March 1 we had the first opportunity to discuss the subject in a wider circle. We met in the university cabin up on the Schauinsland surrounded by snow-covered woods. Prof. Gerhard Ritter was present, too. He spoke about the German-French relation. The Students' Community of the Strasbourg University was represented by two students, who are now also in contact with John Yoder and Albert Meyer and hope to have them as speakers in Strasbourg some time. Students (and Pastors!) cannot be convinced in one day, as Albert said later on, but the discussion proved that some people at least are willing to face the problem and feel that they must decide conscientiously, not letting themselves be persuaded by all kinds of political arguments of the present-day propaganda."

Mrs. Snider Leaves

With this issue thanks are due to Mrs. Howard M. Snider for the excellent help she gave on the Alumni Newsletter during the past nine months. Following commencement Howard and Marie headed for Howard's home community in Saskatchewan to spend the summer there. Marie lightened the editorial work for me a great deal by helping me to collect information and write copy and by assuming most of the responsibility for preparing the copy for the printers and fitting copy on the dummy. The work she herself did and the supervision she gave to others in correcting mailing stencils meant better delivery of the printed copy to your door. Thank you, Marie.

Vic Stoltzfus Joins Us

For the few months this summer, while it is still my responsibility to edit the Newsletter, I have the help of Victor Stoltzfus of Martinsburg, Pa.—one of this year's graduates. Vic was editor of the Record this past year and is much interested in journalism. He has a concern, too, for a correct mailing list and has worked hard to bring it up-to-date by adding the names of this year's graduates. Those who have never worked with mailing lists have little idea how much is involved in keeping addresses, class years, marriages, and deaths accurately recorded on ten thousand stencils and the corresponding cards in the master files. This prompts me to urge upon all of you again your own responsibility to keep us informed whenever our records concerning you are no longer correct.

G.C. Receives New Accreditation

At an April 27 meeting of the Indiana Teachers Training Association and Licensing Commission, a recommendation that Goshen College be accredited for the comprehensive areas of Speech, Arts and Crafts and for preparing library teachers for the junior high school and ninth grade certificates was approved. It was recommended to Goshen College that as the number of speech students increases the faculty be increased to at least two full-time persons and that additional equipment, particularly radio equipment, be added.

Art was first offered as a major this past year when Ezra Hershberger 34 joined the faculty as full-time Assistant Professor of Art. Courses are now offered in four areas—representational art which deals largely with drawing and painting, design which deals with crafts and study of composition, history and appreciation of art, and educational art.

House Cleaning

For those who have never been on the campus during the summer session it might be interesting to know that summer is house cleaning time when extra persons are hired to supplement the regular maintenance staff in an attempt to scrub each building from top to bottom. Often the three months' time and the extra hands are not adequate to do the job as thoroughly as is desired, but many mop-miles are covered and yards of rags consumed. Toward the end of the summer one day is set aside for sewing circle ladies to put freshly laundered mattress covers on mattresses throughout the dormitories.

Closely associated with house cleaning is painting, varnishing, repairing, and remodeling. This year one of the big jobs that is being undertaken is the painting of exterior woodwork on the main campus buildings. The painters are learning to know how many windows there are on such buildings as Coffman Hall and the Ad Building. The installation of a private laboratory adjacent to the general chemistry room has been delayed twice because equipment arrived broken. Pending no further accidents of this sort, the work should be accomplished soon.

About Town

On Sunday evening, June 3, members of the Eighth Street Mennonite congregation broke ground for the enlargement of their church building. The cabin at the rear of the church property has been razed. Now construction is proceeding on the addition which will join the original structure at the southwest and southeast corners to form a building with a central open court. The present entrance will be closed and a new one at ground level constructed at the center of the lengthened façade. The removal of the present entrance and two side rooms will increase the seating capacity of the nave about one fifth. This is the only major change on the main floor of the present building. The new structure will provide greatly expanded facilities for Sunday school and fellowship activities. There will also be rooms for the church office and the pastor's study. Robert Hartzler 41, pastor of the congregation, was in charge of the service.

Former President J. E. Hartzler 10 gave a short address.

In the city school system a critical need was met last year with the construction of a new junior high school building adjacent to the high school. The outstanding need at present is a new building to replace the present Pike Street School. In a recent meeting the Goshen Board of Education approved purchasing a new site west of the Elkhart River and north of Pike Street (Route 33) at Wilkinson and Huron streets. Tentative plans call for an eight-room building for pupils from kindergarten through sixth grade. In announcing the selection of the site, Robert B. Weaver x22, superintendent of the city schools, said construction would begin in 1957. nps

Class of 1916 Establishes Memorial

Presentation of a forty-year gift to the college by the class of 1916 highlighted the Alumni Banquet, Saturday evening, June 2. Earlier in the day eight of the living members of the class, with their husbands and wives and a few special guests, had met at Henry's Tea Room in Goshen. Seven members of the class attended the Alumni Banquet. Their president, Solomon E. Yoder of Lancaster, Pa., toasted for the class and introduced Mary E. Hooley of Goshen, who in turn introduced the other members of the class. Yoder then introduced J. C. Meyer, Sterling, Ohio, who had been treasurer of the class. In presenting the anniversary gift, Meyer spoke of many ideals which faculty and students had envisioned forty years ago, and which have now become part of the witness and service of the Mennonite Church. He presented a check of $600 to President Paul Mininger to be used as the college sees best. It is a memorial to the class sponsor, the late D. S. Gerig, a member of the Goshen College faculty from 1904-23, 1928-30, and 1934-40, registrar from 1905-17, and dean from 1918-19. The memorial statement is to be inscribed in the Book of Remembrance, which the class presented to the college with their gift. Handsomely bound in white leather, the book is intended, not only to memorialize this gift, but to encourage similar memorial gifts by other groups.

Elmer Lehman of Goshen, another member of the class of 1916, asked the blessing upon the meal which preceded the business meeting. Carl Hostetler 33, president of the Alumni Association, was in charge of the brief business session preceding the program and received the class of 1956 into the Association upon the presentation by Karl Massanari 36, sponsor of the class. Victor Stoltzfus responded for the class. John Umble 05, Professor Emeritus of Speech, led a dedicatory prayer. Hostetler then introduced the toastmaster, William Jennings 31, a member of the Ohio State University faculty. The program opened with a selection by a clarinet quintet, with Paul Hodel 57 playing the clarinet; Eleanor Graber 57, viola; Barbara Amstutz 57 and Charlotte Burkhart 54, violin, and Nancy Bender, cello. In toasting for their classes, Loren King 31, West Liberty, Ohio, and Elizabeth (Hershberger) Bauman 46, Orrville, Ohio, spoke of ways in which their classmates had been fulfilling the college motto.

In his address to the alumni President Mininger asked some of the questions which are facing the college and must be answered within the next few years. How large should Goshen College become? What should be the educational program of the college? How may we recruit, prepare, and maintain an able, well-educated, dedicated faculty? How much should Goshen College faculty be paid? How can we retain the values of the small college in the midst of a growing institution? What buildings should we plan for the next few years? He spoke of buildings under construction, on the drawing board, and seen as needs, but not yet in the definite planning stage. He spoke of other needs—renovation of older buildings, new classroom equipment, development of the athletic field, and improvement of campus roads. The 10,000 alumni might well bear an increasing part of the financial burden of the college, for they are the ones who have profited from the work of the college. President Mininger estimated that the faculty were giving $150,000 this year in contributed services, comparing the salaries they were receiving with those they might receive elsewhere. He spoke of plans to invite alumni to share in the discussion of the questions he had raised through an Alumni Consultation Day.

Walter Yoder 33 led the group in the Alma Mater to close the evening's program.

Classes Present Gifts

The 1956 class gift of a 250-watt General Electric F-M transmitter and all necessary accessories reflects the growing interest of students and faculty in radio broadcasting. Very appropriately it meets one of the recommendations of the Indiana Teachers Training and Licensing Commission when they granted Goshen College accreditation in the area of speech. In traditional Class Day exercises Marlin Troyer, chairman of the gift committee, made formal presentation of the gift to President Mininger.

For several months Goshen College has been broadcasting chapel and church services and a limited schedule of recorded programs over a small AM station with very limited range. Goshen's local commercial radio station WKAM has very generously given the college one-half hour of free time daily Monday through Friday from the time it began operation. Transmitting over a 25-mile radius, the new station will broadcast more programs than are currently broadcast over the smaller AM station.

The new equipment will increase facilities for workshop experience in radio broadcasting for various departments, particularly the Speech and Music Departments and the Seminary. It will also expand laboratory experience with electronic equipment for the Physics Department. No doubt the added challenge of the wider broadcast range will stimulate interest in the course Radio Workshop, first offered in the summer of 1955 and repeated each semester since.

Assistant Professor of Education Jacob F. Swartzendruber will direct the use of the station after he obtains the necessary operator's license. He will be assisted largely by student personnel.

Although the transmitter has been purchased from Western Michigan College of Education, many technical problems must be studied before the exact location can be selected and the FCC license can be secured. It is expected that broadcasting can begin on a small scale during the second semester next year, with later expansion inevitable. The total cost of the gift is approximately $1700.

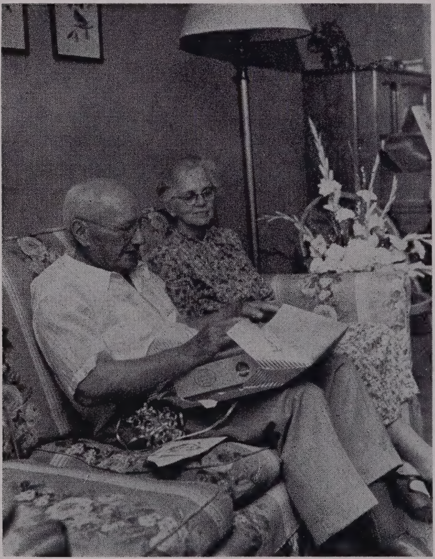
During the Seminary class program May 27 Bernhard Krahn, president of the class, gave President Mininger a check for $120 as the class gift. This money is to be used for furnishing a seminar room in the new seminary building to be constructed soon.

Umbles Mark Anniversary

"These have been good years," say John and Alice Umble after almost fifty years of married life. Professor Emeritus of English and Speech Umble and his wife celebrated their Golden Anniversary, Sunday, June 24. Although they were married on Christmas Day, 1906, they celebrated their anniversary in June because the family will be scattered on Christmas Day of 1956. Two hundred persons came to extend greetings at an open house held for the honored couple by their sons Frank and Roy and their families in Roy's home on Marilyn Avenue.



John Umble and Alice Landis met at Elkhart Institute, both being members of the class of 1901. He was born at Lewisburg, Pa., but his family lived at West Liberty, Ohio, at the time. She was a native of Sterling, Ill., but her family was then living at Union, Oreg. Before they were married, they both served on the faculties of Elkhart Institute and Goshen College. He taught Latin, English, history, and mathematics. She taught music and commerce.

John Umble graduated from Northwestern University in 1906 with a B.A. in German. Following this he taught at Mt. Vernon, Ind., in the high school as head of the German department. Since at that time many of the people of Mt. Vernon spoke German, the language course he taught was quite important.

The Umbles next moved to Akron, Ohio, where he taught a freshman homeroom and also coached the freshman football squad. In 1910 he had the opportunity to tour in Europe, visiting Holland, Germany, and Switzerland. Commenting on the tour, Umble said, "The round-trip fare was only $350!"

Feeling the urge to live in a Mennonite community again, the family left the city of Akron and moved to West Liberty, Ohio. While in Ohio Umble served the Mennonite Church as a member of the Ohio Sunday School Conference until 1924.

In 1924 Sanford Yoder, then president of Goshen College, asked Umble to join the Goshen College faculty as head of the English department. By that time the Umbles were living in Portage County, Ohio, on a 185-acre farm. Their sons Frank and Roy were seventeen and eleven and loved farm life. Umble managed to satisfy their yen for farming as well as his own academic ambition by accepting President Yoder's offer and moving to the college farm in March of 1925.

Thirteen years later he had the opportunity to pioneer in a new area of the college by becoming head of the Speech Department. Study continued for Umble in the summers at the University of Colorado, University of Chicago, Northwestern University (M.A. 1928), and Garrett Biblical Institute.

In addition to his academic work through the years Umble found time for many "extracurriculars." Attempting to boost the low enrollment of the early years, he toured out of state as well as visiting local high schools as a student solicitor. Quartet numbers, or sometimes a violin solo, and a solicitation appeal made up the program. At first this work was done on his own time and expense, but later he was remunerated for part of his travel expense.

Alumni work interested Umble because of the strong program of his own Alma Mater, Northwestern University. Realizing that alumni support is a vital part of a college program he promoted alumni unity and support. He also edited the Alumni Newsletter from 1932 to 1952.

Writing his M.A. thesis, Umble commented, taught him to do research in the proper manner. This led him to what he terms his "major avocation"—historiography. He is a charter member of both the Mennonite Historical Society and the editorial staff of the Mennonite Quarterly Review. "It has been a joy to work with Dean Bender and others of the society," he said.

Umble's writings to date include: Mennonite Pioneers (1940), Ohio Mennonite Sunday Schools (1941), and the 284-page history of Goshen College published last year.

It is a particular joy for the Umbles to have both of their sons, Frank and Roy, living with them in Goshen. Frank recently entered the employ of the Goshen Milk Condensing Company as a chemist, and Roy has continued his father's work as a professor of speech at Goshen College.

If it is true that youth is not a time of life but a state of mind, the Umbles have truly kept their hold on youth. Both are active and happy in their retirement years. The times when two weeks of teaching produced only a $25 check are almost forgotten now. "These have been good years." vs

To Teach, To Nurse, To Serve

Book Review

Religion and Literature, by I. C. Keller; Richard R. Smith, Rindge, New Hampshire; 1956; pp. 64; $2.00 (may be ordered from the author, California, Pa.).

Isaac C. Keller draws from the two predominant aspects of his life to write Religion and Literature, recently published by Richard R. Smith. Now retired, he taught literature in various colleges for forty-six years—four of them at Goshen College. He was born in a parsonage and grew up in a minister's home. The stamp of his home life remained. He has been an active Christian layman, occasionally taking preaching assignments. During his stay in Goshen he taught a large Sunday-school class in the First Presbyterian Church. Those of us who missed having him as a teacher but had the privilege of hearing him address faculty and students in chapel on one of his recent visits to the campus have been impressed by his earnest Christian spirit.

In Religion and Literature, Keller does not attempt to present an exhaustive study of these two great disciplines. Nor does he seek to analyze all of the religious aspects in the writings of each of the one or two great authors whom he treats in each of the thirteen chapters of the book. Rather he selects one religious theme, briefly summarizing aspects of the writer's life which indicate the significance for his selection in connection with the theme and illustrating with a few quotations from

by Melvin Gingerich 26, fac 49

More than twenty alumni of Goshen College were serving as missionaries, teachers, or relief workers in the Land of the Rising Sun during the past year. Scattered all the way from the northern island of Hokkaido to the southeast corner of the southern island of Kyushu, a distance of more than 1,000 miles separates the alumni living in Japan's extremities. During the past six months, I have visited most of these sons and daughters of Goshen and have observed them in their work. This is a brief report of their locations and activities.

Farthest north in Hokkaido are Lee 49 and Adella (Brunk) 44 Kanagy, who with their three children live in Nakashibetsu. Here Lee has built a modern, attractive kindergarten building, which is receiving excellent support from the citizens of the community. Lee serves as principal of the school and also regularly meets his congregation there. Like other Mennonite missionaries in Japan he also carries on work in outstations.

Approximately 150 miles southwest by train is Hombetsu, the home of Don 51 and Barbara (Bender) pt52 Reber and their four daughters. Here they have gathered a small congregation which worships in a rented sewing school. They are formulating plans for the erection of a kindergarten building in the city. Don has been active in tract preparation and distribution, in tent evangelism, and in summer camp promotion, and soon will be moving to Sapporo where he will promote radio evangelism.

Obihiro, the home of Carl 48 and Esther (Thut) pt56 Beck and their daughter, lies approximately thirty miles southwest of Hombetsu. The Becks have recently returned to Japan from their first furlough and have moved back into their Obihiro home, with its church chapel in the basement. Obihiro being somewhat centrally located with reference to the other Mennonite churches is a convenient meeting place for the missionaries. Carl's use of cinder blocks in the construction of his home has led to a revolution in housing in Hokkaido.

Approximately thirty miles north of Obihiro is Kamishihoro, the home of Ruth 38 and Rhoda 35 Ressler. Living in a small but comfortable government-owned cinder block house, they direct many missionary activities in their home, including English classes, Bible classes, and courses in cooking and sewing. Their extension work takes them into the surrounding villages. A recent vacation took them to Osaka where they renewed their English class work of former years.

South of Obihiro is Taiki-machi, where Eugene 49 and Louella (Gingerich) 47 Blosser and their two children have recently established their mission, having left Obihiro when the Becks returned to their home. The Blossers are busy building a new home in Taiki.

About half way between the northern tip of Japan's main island and its capital city of Tokyo is Sendai, the home of Mary Ann (Hostetler) 48 Melchert and her husband James, who is teaching in the Evangelical and Reformed mission school of that city. James is doing his I-W assignment in his teaching position. The Melcherts will return to the States next winter, after which James will enroll in graduate school. They have been busy in promoting work camps.

In Tokyo four Goshen College families have been meeting occasionally for social and spiritual fellowship. Carl 36 and Evelyn (Burkholder) 36 Kreider and their three children have been living on the campus of International Christian University in Mitaka, a western suburb of Tokyo. Here Carl has served as academic dean, laying lasting foundations for Christian higher education in Japan. The family has made a deep impact not only upon the life of the university but also upon the wider Christian community of Tokyo. Members of the official board refer to Carl as having been a "tower of strength" during the formative years of their institution. On June 10 the Kreiders left Japan for a tour of Europe and their return to America.

Don 45 and Dorothy (Snapp) 44 McCammon and their two children live in the Tokyo Mennonite Center. Don is pastor of the Tokyo Mennonite Church, which ministers primarily to Mennonite students from Hokkaido and Kyushu, who are attending the universities of Tokyo. Dorothy serves as treasurer and bookkeeper of the Mennonite mission in Hokkaido, and with the complicated Japanese tax laws to which foreigners are subject, finds her assignment an exacting one.

Joe sem 54 and Emma (Sommers) 49 Richards are in Japanese language school in Tokyo. They with their two children have their home in the northern part of the city, where they recently gave a farewell dinner in honor of the Carl Kreiders to all of the Tokyo Mennonites. The Richards help the McCammons in the church program of the Mennonite Center. This summer they will move to Hombetsu and take over the work of the Rebers, who are moving to Sapporo.

Shunzo Kodera pg 55 whose home is in the Osaka region is traveling about in Japan lecturing in the Christian short course farming schools sponsored by Dr. Kagawa. His specialty is horticulture. Shunzo and his wife have recently been adopted by a wealthy, childless Japanese couple residing in the States.

Yuko Shinohara 55 is the instructor of kindergarten education in Shoei Junior College of Kobe. For a number of weeks during the winter Yuko was confined because of illness but is again back in the classroom. Recently while attending a teachers' meeting in Tokyo, she visited in our home.

In Miyazaki City of southern Kyushu, Bernard 52 and Ruby (Siebert) 52 Thiessen and their two children are living in the General Conference Mennonite mission headquarters, where Bernard is pastor of the church. Bernard is chairman of the Kyushu Mennonite mission, teaches Bible classes, and preaches regularly in the Miyazaki church. Besides doing the regular work of a pastor's wife, Ruby teaches a class in cooking. In January the Thiessens were hosts to the Japan All-Mennonite Conference.

We ourselves, Melvin 26 and Verna (Roth) x29 Gingerich, are serving a two-year term under the Peace Section of the Mennonite Central Committee and live in one of the homes of the MCC compound in southwestern Tokyo. My work consists of studying the Japanese Peace movement, interviewing its leaders, addressing the Mennonite and other churches in behalf of the peace witness, sponsoring peace conferences, and preparing peace materials to be translated into the Japanese language. My lecture trips have taken me into Hokkaido and Kyushu. Verna has been helping both with the Peace Section work and Material Aid.

(The following letter was written for the Goshen College Record. Since it failed to get into print there, and since it tells more of the work the Gingerichs are doing, we are publishing it here. nps)

We have been in Japan almost five months and in that time there has not been a dull moment. Living in Tokyo has many advantages over living in smaller Oriental cities. There is scarcely an aspect of Japanese life that one can not study in this city or in the areas nearby. At the same time, if one becomes homesick for western foods or products, one can find these in the Tokyo stores, although he may have to pay almost double price for them. Here there are beautiful parks, art galleries, and many other cultural attractions. Hibiya Music Hall features this winter the Vienna Choir Boys, the Don Cossack Chorus, the Vienna Orchestra, and the Stuttgart Chamber Orchestra, as well as many other outstanding programs.

I have been spending considerable time studying the culture and religions of Japan as well as the Peace movements in this country. This is in preparation for my work in delivering lectures on the Christian peace message. These lectures are being given in the various Mennonite mission stations of the three major islands. This study is also preparation for my writing of peace literature to be used in our Mennonite missions. Thus far I have delivered ten lectures before Japanese audiences, with the help, of course, of interpreters. As this part of the program expands, I shall be addressing clubs, churches, and university groups on subjects related to the Christian peace witness. Recently I gave the vesper message in the Tokyo Union English-speaking Church on "The Church Looks at War."

During Christmas vacation we had the privilege of visiting all of our mission stations in Hokkaido. Recently we spent a number of days in Kyushu in the General Conference Mennonite missions. So we have had the privilege of considerable travel since arriving here last September.

During these weeks we have learned to know a considerable number of Japanese young people of high-school and college age and have made what we believe will be lasting friendships among them. Verna has an English conversation class in our home each Tuesday evening and through this avenue we have learned to know perhaps forty students. At the MCC Center and also at the Mennonite Church we have learned to know others. They are a sincere group, very courteous and well-mannered, extremely anxious to learn English conversation, and those that are not already Christians appear to be earnest seekers. On Sunday afternoon, we will discuss "Why War Is Evil" and in the evening we shall discuss "The Alternatives to Participation in the Evils of War."

Thus far we have visited with at least nineteen former Goshen College students who are missionaries and teachers in Japan. Some of them we see fairly often, and usually we exchange Goshen news.

Profs Burn Midnight Oil

If you visit the campus this summer and find a professor hidden behind a hundred or so books at a library table or in his office, don't disturb him. Noise may affect him, but he will probably be oblivious to it. unless it is directed specifically toward him. He needs plenty of light and a good supply of midnight oil. He's working on a doctoral dissertation.

Dean of Students Atlee Beechy is continuing with his research on a "Conceptual Framework of Guidance." Using the philosophical-historical approach, he is attempting to evaluate current concepts of guidance and personnel in three movements —mental hygiene, vocational guidance, and child growth and development—and to project their theoretical basis. He has a table in the Mennonite Historical Library for his work.

Mary Eleanor Bender is spending her second summer on "The Anabaptist Theme in Twentieth Century German Literature." Keeping in mind that the term "Anabaptist" is applied to a sixteenth-century group and the literature studied is twentieth century, it is surprising to find that thirty-five titles are involved in the study. She also has a table in the Mennonite Historical Library.

It takes a philosopher to face "The Problems of Social Responsibility of the (Old) Mennonite Church in the Light of the Responsible Society." J. Lawrence Burkholder is sweating this one out in his second-floor office in the Administration Building.

Howard Charles is studying "The Charismatic Life in the Apostolic Church." As he attempts to describe the special gifts of the Spirit which characterized some of the early believers, he faces row upon row of books on the tables in the east seminar room of the library.

John Fisher is teaching a full load in the summer session. As he has opportunity, he works on his analysis of "Rhetorical Patterns in Swift's Prose," which requires some week-end trips to the University of Chicago Library.

Alternating between fowls and files, Roman Gingerich combines turkey-raising and a "Comparison of Physical Education Programs of Church Related Colleges in Indiana." Roman does most of his research at his home on College Avenue.

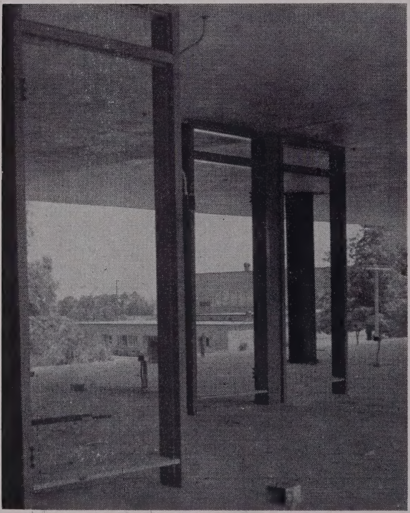
Throughout the second semester and continuing into the summer J. Howard Kauffman has been pursuing his "A Study of Mennonite Family Life." Howard will usually be found in the Mennonite Research Foundation office in Kenwood House on South Eighth Street.

John Oyer struggles with sixteenth-century (middle high) German as he works with "The Writings of the Lutheran Reformers Against the Anabaptists." When he is reading those sixteenth-century books and tracts which are available at Goshen only on microfilm, he works in the Mennonite Historical Library, but his research headquarters are his office in the basement of Science Hall.

Men at Work

The roof slab has been poured on the Arts Building, but there are still some weeks to wait until the concrete has hardened sufficiently for the slabs to be raised in the meantime, J. Gordon Jackson and the construction crews have been concentrating their efforts on the new dormitory.

It is a bit unusual to be able to look through a building with no side walls and to see water and steam pipes, electrical conduits, and door frames in place. No pipes are visible in the accompanying picture, but one can see door frames on both sides of the central corridor, several wall outlet boxes, and a wall switch on the top floor of the building.



The picture was taken June 20 from one of the west side rooms, looking southeast toward the Union Building.

By the end of June most of the exterior masonry on the dormitory had been completed. The end walls are solid brick and concrete block masonry from foundation to roof. On the sides, the brick portions of the wall are merely screens, filling the spaces between concrete slabs and window frames. With this non-weight bearing side wall construction, it is possible to have almost continuous "ribbons" of glass from one end of the building to the other. The combination of brick, concrete, and glass, with aluminum window frames, promises a minimum of maintenance expense in the years ahead.

With most of the materials on hand and construction possible in all sorts of weather, it should be possible to have the building ready for occupancy by September. Then work can proceed on the Arts Building to prepare it for use by the second semester.

the man's writings. He usually closes his chapters with references to present-day spiritual needs as he seeks "from books a way of life." Perhaps two of his strongest chapters are those on "Tennyson and Faith" and "'Renascence'—the Rebirth of a Human Soul."

With its short chapters forming units within themselves, the book makes an ideal volume for browsing. The reader who has only a few minutes for reading can quickly read through a chapter and go on his way with food for meditation in the hours that follow. He will lay the volume aside with a new appreciation for English and American literary masters. nps

In Memoriam

Clayton Woodrow Gerber, Chappell, Nebr., met instant death on April 26, when a Jeep he was driving overturned into the back of a truck as he attempted to avoid an oncoming car. Born Dec. 28, 1931, he was the youngest son of Mrs. Ida (Yoder) Gerber of Hesston, Kans. On Sept. 1, 1953, he was married to Anna Jean Amstutz of Kidron, Ohio. To them was born one daughter, Sharon Louise. His mother, wife, and daughter survive. Other survivors include three brothers (Earl, Chappell; Emery and Marion, Harper, Kans.) and two sisters (Lela—Mrs. Warren Cornett, Pasco, Wash., and Leona—Mrs. George Hostetler, Richmond, Va.). Preceding him in death were his father (the late Joseph Gerber), a brother, and a sister.

Clayton was graduated from the junior college at Hesston College and Bible School in 1952 and enrolled at Goshen College as a junior that September. As a student at both places he was active in a variety of campus activities, including Y.P.C.A., student council, music, and athletics. Those who were his fellow students at Goshen will remember him for his performance on the basketball floor and for his interpretation of Scrooge in the Adelphian-Vesperian public program.

Following their marriage, Clayton and his wife went to Mountain Home, Ark., where Clayton helped with the work of the Mountain View Mennonite Church and taught the Christian Day School for two years as his I-W service. Since leaving Arkansas, he had been employed at Chappell and was looking forward to returning to Goshen to complete his college work and enter the seminary here.

Menno Simons Scholars

Within the past year the G.C. scholarship system was carefully studied and reworked. One of the major changes was the discontinuance of the former freshman scholarships and the establishment of five Menno Simons scholarships of $400 awarded annually, each to be paid to the recipient in four annual installments. Candidates for admission to the freshman class may apply for the scholarship prior to May 1. This year twenty-four persons applied for Menno Simons scholarships. The awards, based upon high-school record, character, contribution to church and community life, and performance on a special examination, were granted to the following, all children of alumni: Nancy Gerber, daughter of Ross 33 and Ruth (Hertzler) 35 Gerber, Apple Creek, Ohio; Estel Nafziger, son of Orrin w26 and Beatrice (Slabaugh) x29 Nafziger, Hopedale, Ill.; Kermit Roth, son of Isaac S. x31 and Lita (Phillips) Roth, Goshen, Ind.; Mary Ann Smucker, daughter of Orrin J. x31 and Blanche (Hillman) Smucker, Plain City, Ohio; and Mary Jean Yoder, daughter of Jonathan 27 and Fyrne (Miller) 30 Yoder, Goshen, Ind.

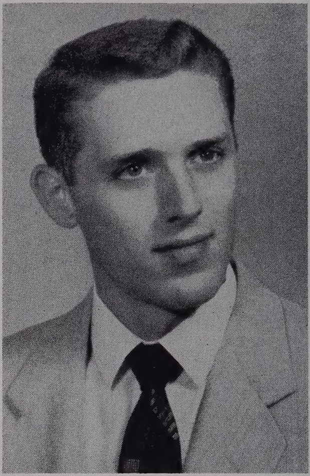
Virgil Vogt to Be Editor

It affords me true pleasure to introduce to our alumni Virgil Vogt, who takes my place as editor of the Alumni Newsletter with the next issue. Virgil is a native of India and grew up there. (His parents, Milton C. 27 and Esther (Kulp) Vogt, have been missionaries there since 1927.) He took his high-school work and his first two years of college at Hesston College and Bible School and completed his college work at Goshen. At Hesston he was a member of the Student Council during his college sophomore year, sang in choruses, and participated in other campus activities. Among other extracurriculars at Goshen, he was a member of the Student-Faculty Council and editor of the College Record during his senior year. In 1953 he married Joan Miller of Filer, Idaho, whom he had met at Hesston. Joan worked in the Public Relations office at Goshen while Virgil was a senior here.

A commerce major, Virgil received the B.S. in Education at Goshen in 1954. For the next two years he and Joan worked at Mennonite Central Committee headquarters in Akron, Pa., where Virgil served his I-W assignment as assistant director of I-W services, and Joan was a secretary in the same department. Virgil returns to Goshen as a student in the seminary with a half-time staff assignment in the Alumni Relations office. He and Joan are living in the Eighth Street House apartment.

As Virgil begins his new work, a number of things equip him in a special way for the task. The experiences of a missionary child are more cosmopolitan than those of the average G.C. student. Virgil's six years at Hesston and two years at Goshen have given him a wide range of acquaintances. He has his journalistic experience as editor of the Record. Two years of administrative work with MCC have enriched these other experiences. Underlying all of these is his love for life and for people that is evident from the gleam in his eyes and his ready smile.

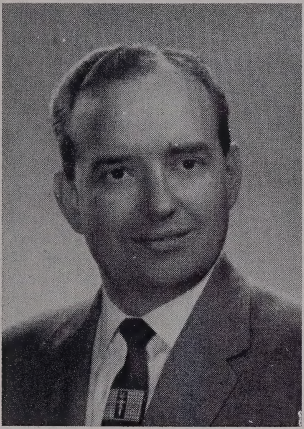


Virgil is a second-generation alumnus. He entered Goshen College when the school was preparing to celebrate its fiftieth anniversary of the move to the present campus after almost a decade as Elkhart Institute in Elkhart. There are thousands of alumni whom he has never met, and hundreds whom he has learned to know without being conscious of their being alumni. This makes it imperative that all alumni help to share his work. If we want the Newsletter to continue to keep us in touch with each other, we will need to supply him with news about ourselves and other alumni. Perhaps that is not what we want. If so, we should express ourselves to Virgil to help him plan his work. I know he will appreciate your ideas of what the Newsletter should be, and your help in carrying out his objectives. As time permits, he will give attention to other phases of alumni relations. In July he attended a convention of the American Alumni Council at French Lick, Ind., when alumni officers from many colleges and universities met together for four days to discuss problems and to exchange ideas. He brings an enthusiasm to the task which promises us a good Alumni Newsletter.

Now, thanks to the many who have helped me with the work during the past two years. It has been good to have this more intimate touch with you. Pray for Virgil as he takes up the work. Pray for me, too, as I devote my time more excusively to the Mennonite Historical Library. ns

Alumni Coming to Administrative Posts

With the advancement of Atlee Beechy to the new office of Dean of Students, Lester Glick becomes Dean of Men. Lester came to Goshen College in the fall of 1937 and spent one year here. Returning to his home community at Sugarcreek, Ohio, he worked there until his induction into CPS in June, 1941. During the next four and one-half years he was stationed successively at Marietta, Ohio; Macedonia, Ohio; Goshen College for the Relief Training School; Ypsilanti, Mich.; and Minneapolis, Minn., where he participated in a starvation experiment under the Office of Scientific Research and Development. There followed a period of recuperation from the effects of the experiment, after which he served as a trucker and as assistant director of relief for the Mennonite Central Committee at Akron, Pa.



Lester Glick

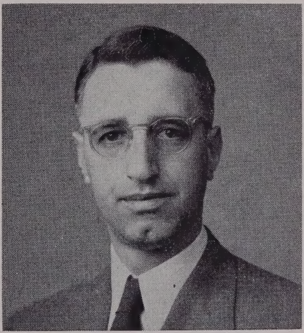
Lester married Doris Miller 46 of Goshen in the summer of 1947. She shared with him the responsibility of managing the Goshen College Bookstore and Snack Shop during the next two years, while he completed his college work. Majoring in sociology, he received his B.A. in 1949. He then entered graduate school at Ohio State University, where he received an M.A. in Social Administration in 1951. While he was in graduate school, he worked part time as program director at the Methodist Children's Home, Worthington, Ohio. Following his graduation, he and Doris served as house parents for twelve-year-old boys at the Franklin County Children's Home. From the latter part of 1951 until the end of July this year he was director of Boys' Village, Smithville, Ohio. Boys' Village, operated by a private agency, is a home for emotionally disturbed adolescent boys from twelve to eighteen years of age, most of whom come from broken homes, some of whom are delinquent, and all whom have some kind of social problem. Its staff includes a number of trained professional persons and a consultant psychiatrist. The capacity of the home is thirty-six.

Lester and Doris have two children—Ronald, four and one-half, and Christine, three. They have purchased a house at 1631 South Main Street, just south of the Howard Kauffman home.

J. Robert Kreider of Wadsworth, Ohio, brother to Dean Carl Kreider, comes to the new administrative post of Director of Development. His responsibility will be to work with President Paul Mininger in planning and supervising the total fund-raising program of the college.

Robert received his B.A. from Goshen College in 1941 with a major in economics. He was editor of the 1940 Maple Leaf, sang in college choruses and organized quartets, took an active part in campus organizations, and teamed with Charles Ainlay 41 to establish some of the most outstanding debate records in G.C. forensic history. He was married to Virginia Stalter x42 of Flanagan, Ill., in June, 1941, and worked in the accounting department of Babcock and Wilcox Company, Barberton, Ohio, until he was inducted into CPS in March, 1943. His three years in CPS were spent at Clearspring, Md., and Medaryville, Ind. During this time he was ordained to the ministry at his home church, the Bethel Mennonite Church, Wadsworth, Ohio. Upon his release from CPS he worked for a while in the Medina County auditor's office. During the 1946-47 school year he was a student in the Goshen College Biblical Seminary. He then entered the employ of the Buick Garage in Wadsworth as an accountant, remaining there until the Bethel Mennonite Church called him to the full-time pastorate about a year ago. This summer he spent a week with President Mininger at a Workshop on Fund Raising for College Presidents, et al. under the direction of Syracuse University at Chautauqua, New York.

Robert and Virginia have four boys, Evan, Paul, Mark, and Bruce. They have purchased a home in Martin Manor south of Goshen, moving there in late August.



John E. Lehman

Also coming to a new administrative post is John E. Lehman, who becomes Assistant to the President. As a student John came to Goshen College from Columbiana, Ohio. He spent three years at Goshen College, received an elementary teacher training certificate in 1935, taught in his home community, and returned to Goshen for summer sessions to complete his work for the B.S. in Education in 1939, majoring in history. Inducted in 1943, he spent three years in CPS, part of the time at Wells Tannery, Pa., where he was educational director, and the remainder of the time at Malcolm, Nebr., where he was director of the farm and community school unit. The quality of his work at Wells Tannery was such that the Mennonite Central Committee appointed him over-all co-ordinating secretary to assist the educational secretary at the Akron, Pa., headquarters, even though he remained with his camp job.

In July, 1948, two years after his release from CPS, John and his wife, the former Margaret Swope 44, began a two-year term with MCC in Ethiopia. In August, 1952, John became director and Margaret matron of the MRSC community service project at La Plata, Puerto Rico. They have continued in these capacities, until MRSC released them to come to Goshen for John's new assignment.

The Lehmans have four children, Tommy, Mary, Rebecca, and David. They are living at 314 South Ninth Street.

Church-Chapel Planned for Campus

by Carl Miller 40

Construction will start sometime after January 1, 1957, on a new church-chapel building on the campus. A joint venture of the College Mennonite Church and the Mennonite Board of Education, it also will include an educational wing which the congregation will use for Sunday school and other congregational activities. The building will be located south of the College Union on what is now a parking lot. Later, when the seminary building is constructed, the church-chapel and educational facility will form an integral unit with the seminary structure.

Congregation members, in a two-week fund-raising campaign in July, oversubscribed a $175,000 goal, raising approximately $193,000. This does not include $23,000 on hand before the campaign began, money that the congregation had set aside over the years for building purposes. Cost of the building program has been estimated at $350,000. The college will raise its share, $175,000, among constituents over a three-year period, starting in 1957. The amount oversubscribed by the congregation it is now thought will be sufficient to handle anticipated increased costs in building.

Orus Eash x38, Fort Wayne, Ind., who has been architect for other recent buildings on the campus, has been hired to draw plans for the church-chapel. Supervision of construction will be handled by a building committee from the congregation and representatives of the Board of Education. Planning of the structure is being done entirely by representatives of the congregation.

Kaethlers Take up Medical Work in Paraguay

Colonia Friesland
Alto, Paraguay
June, 1956

Dear Friends,

Greetings from Friesland where we are making our home for the present. Two months ago we came here to take up the medical service in this community. The days were filled with getting settled, becoming acquainted, and diving right into the work. While we were in the process of adjusting to a new community and work, we also took time for a new adjustment within our family. May 26 was the important red-letter day when Wilfried became the proud big brother to a little sister. Wilma Elfriede weighed about seven and one-half pounds at birth, has dark blue eyes and much brown hair, and is a contented, healthy baby. We are a happy, thankful family of four now.

The community here has a thirty-bed hospital with delivery room and operating room. Before we came here, Friesland had a Russian medical doctor for a number of years and more recently a Paraguayan physician for several months. Although we are still in the beginning, service is picking up gradually. Over fifty per cent of the patients are Paraguayans. The staff is small until the service becomes well established and regulated. At present there are five nurses, one male nurse, one pharmacist, and one receptionist to help the doctor. There is outpatient clinic almost every day. One and one-half days a week are scheduled for elective surgery. As always in such small communities, some days are light and others very busy, too much so for a small working force. This happened two weeks ago when an obstetrical patient, after normal delivery, started to bleed profusely. Doctor and nurses were busy all day trying to stop the bleeding and to combat the blood loss. There is no blood bank here; so donors with the right blood type have to be found in the colony. One could be found immediately and walked several miles to give about 400 c.c. of this life-saving fluid. But by night the patient turned worse again. On top of it all, rain was pouring down all day and all night. Where should blood be gotten? The hospital personnel had to be typed, and the doctor's blood was the only type that matched. So he had to give blood, administer it, and watch the patient after a hard day. Then he lay down to sleep, only to be called soon for a delivery at night. The next morning he had to do surgery. Those were hard days, but this does not and could not happen often. However, we are thankful that this patient's life was saved.

So far we have enjoyed our community and our service here, and we ask God to bless our work.

Sincerely,

Wilhelm, Frieda, Wilfried, and Wilma Kaethler

STRENGTHENING THE CHURCH THROUGH THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

Sunday School Convention

About 3,000 persons crowded in and around the Union Building for the final session of the fifth Mennonite Sunday School Convention held here August 9 to 12. Seated on the platform were more than three hundred children who participated in the opening exercises. Late-comers to the Sunday evening meeting had to satisfy themselves with seats on the lawn north of the Union Building and in the lounge.

Incoming cars got in each other's way as they tried to find their places in the parking lot. The resulting traffic snarl on highway 15 involved Donald Yoder 53, Middlebury, Ind., and his family in an auto accident. Parking attendants counted seven hundred and sixty cars in the parking lot.

Convention Director J. J. Hostetler AA 48, Peoria, Ill., delivered the closing address on the subject, "Strength Through Utilizing God-given Resources." He reminded the delegates that thirty million children have arrived in American homes since 1940. He said this army of children will someday dominate all aspects of national life. "We can still determine whether they will be Christian or pagan," insisted Hostetler, since over one fifth of the children are under twelve years of age.

Nearly one thousand delegates from all over the United States and Canada were registered during the four-day convention. The college dining room and dormitories accommodated the out-of-state visitors. These delegates came from the seven hundred and forty-three Sunday schools now being operated by the Mennonite Church. Doctor, Minister Write Books

Growing Up to Love, by H. Clair Amstutz; Herald Press, Scottdale, Pa.; 1956; pp. 103; $2.50.

Cutting a sharp path through the confusion resulting from attempts to handle sex problems by ignoring the sex nature on the one hand and an open flouting of sex on the other, college physician H. Clair Amstutz 33 places sex in its God-given setting of mutual love in the Christian home, and there finds the answers which parents may give to their children's questions.

With its subtitle, "A Guide to Sex Education for Parents," the book attempts to help parents understand themselves and the basic problems which underlie the sex questions of children. Basing his approach to these problems upon a Christian philosophy of sex, Amstutz asserts that sex education belongs in the home, where the story of how life begins and unfolds can be kept pure. Since the child's understanding and his relations to parents and other individuals are not static, sex education is a continuing process, calling for a direct personal approach—not a once for all session when all the answers are given, nor the presentation of a book to be read. The problem for parents, like that for children, varies according to individual personalities. The method which Amstutz uses, therefore, is not a didactic outline of steps to be followed. The book is one of principles rather than specifics. As he guides the parent through the problems peculiar to each age group, however, Amstutz does illustrate with sufficient typical situations to keep his discussion thoroughly practical. This is especially true when he deals with the period of adolescence, giving an entire chapter to the problems peculiar to boys and another to those peculiar to girls.

Herald Press is publishing this book in co-operation with the Mennonite Commission for Christian Education. It is a companion volume to the series of booklets on dating, courtship, and home relations published by Herald Press in 1952. Amstutz was also the author of two of these booklets—So You're Going to Be Married and Becoming Parents.

Crumbs from the Master's Table, by J. B. Brunk, Goshen, Ind.; 1956; pp. 120; $2.00.

Written after his retirement from the public ministry and published two months before his death, Crumbs from the Master's Table represents the preaching and teaching of Jacob B. Brunk a02 during fifty years of active ministry. Brunk was ordained to the ministry in the Mennonite Church and later transferred to the Church of God, serving both as pastor and educator. When his physical strength failed and he could no longer continue his preaching ministry, he sought this means of continuing to tell of his love for Jesus Christ.

Brunk conceived the book a few years ago, he explains, when his meditations impressed upon him the use Christ made of little things. "I learned that the little things became the chief sources of Christ's kingdom work. They were then, and are today full of potential power." The chapter heads are indicative of this approach. The children's crumbs, five loaves and two fishes, a widow's two mites, a grain of mustard seed, a mother hen and her chicks, a bit of leaven, a child, the hem of Christ's garment, a jot and a tittle, a grain of wheat, a little flock of sheep, a cup of cold water—all were subjects of Christ's teachings—all hold lessons equally valid for us today.

Brunk does not attempt merely to give the historical setting out of which Christ's teachings concerning little things arose and to interpret their meaning for the people of that day. In each instance he relates them to our own times and his own personal experiences. In many chapters he breaks out with a prayer arising out of his meditation. The book is a testimony to his own understanding of the Scriptures. He recognizes differences of interpretation and readers may disagree with some of his interpretations.

Brunk closes the book with the prayer, "Lord Jesus, extend the brittle thread of life a little longer until we minister a little more to the suffering and dying for Thy name's sake." The Lord saw fit to snap the thread while Brunk still had plans for further service, but the book continues his ministry.

In Memoriam

Jacob B. Brunk was born September 24, 1877, at Elida, Ohio, and died at the Goshen General Hospital August 21, 1956, having suffered a stroke a few days previously. In 1901 he was married to Ada V. Shank x97 who survives with their three daughters (Esther—Mrs. Frederic Fadner 27, Crawfordsville, Ind.; Ruth—Mrs. Cleon Fleck 31, Fort Wayne, Ind.; and Geneva—Mrs. Joseph Montague x36), their son (Sharon a28, x32, Goshen), six granchildren, and a sister (Anna—Mrs. Amos Rhodes, La Junta Colo.). He was graduated from the academy at Goshen College in 1902, attended winter Bible term in 1908, and took further work during the summer of 1911. He was ordained a minister in the Mennonite Church, serving congregations in Ohio, Kansas, Colorado, and Mississippi, and later transferred his membership to the Church of God. Just before his retirement he had served a pastorate and taught in the Church of God Missionary Training School at Plymouth, Ind. He attended the alumni dinner at the college in June, making a special effort to greet his old acquaintances who were present. Later in June he published a book, Crumbs from the Master's Table. Funeral services were held at the Yoder Funeral Home, Goshen, August 24, with Robert Deal, pastor of the Church of God, Goshen, and Russell Krabill 43, pastor of the North Goshen Mennonite Church in charge. Burial was in Violett Cemetery south of Goshen.

F. H. Hostetler was born near Goshen, Ind., March 22, 1874, and died at Nampa, Idaho, February 20, 1956 after an extended illness. At the age of ten he moved with his parents to McPherson, Kans., where he grew to manhood. He attended Elkhart Institute during the academic year 1896-97. He also attended McPherson College and taught school for six years, after which he prepared to be a veterinary. In 1898 he married Dessie Yoder of Garden City, Mo. They moved to Boise Valley in 1905 and to Nampa in 1906, where he practiced his profession for almost fifty years. He was a member of the Mennonite Church, serving as Sunday-school teacher and superintendent during his early years at Nampa, and later as a member of the Pacific Coast District Mission Board and as treasurer of the Nampa congregation. He was a member of the Idaho Veterinary Association and served as a Nampa city councilman for many years. Surviving are his wife; a son, Leo F., of Boise; two daughters, Vertie (Mrs. Harold Bailey), and Adelia (Mrs. C. S. Roth) 30, both of Nampa; seven grandchildren, and seven great-grandchildren. A son, Orval, and a daughter, Anna Velma preceded him in death. Funeral services were held in Nampa, with D. A. Good, Robert Garber, and Harold Hochstetler in charge. Burial was made in Kahlerlawn Cemetery there.

CONSTRUCTION OF NEW ARTS BUILDING TO BE COMPLETED BY MARCH

Goshen College Bulletin:

Vol. L November, 1956 No. 13

The Alumni Newsletter

EDITORIAL

What Kind of Newsletter

There are several interesting parallels between the workings of an administrative organization and, of all things, a football game. First, there is that vast throng in the bleachers—the constituents. Then, in both cases, there is a relatively small group or team which is responsible for most of the decisive action. A major responsibility for the outcome of the game rests on the shoulders of this small group.

Of course the crowds in the bleachers play an important role too. It is only their loyal support, expressed both vocally and at the box office, that makes it possible for the team to continue playing. But the team makes the plays.

This center of interest narrows even further as one member of the football team takes the ball and tries to advance it toward the goal line. At this point the people in the bleachers may have many different ideas about what the lone player should do. But they are united as they wonder, "What will he actually do with that ball?"

Nelson Springer has passed me the editorial ball. And, without any delusions about a vast throng, I am nevertheless assuming that there are at least a few interested persons who are wondering, "What's he going to do with it?" For the benefit of these persons I will offer a few suggestions.

There are several basic ingredients which leading alumni editors feel are essential to a good alumni publication. The magazine should include items about the alumni, the institution, the students, items of comment and opinion and others aimed at intellectual stimulation. This literary diet should occasionally be supplemented by special features of one kind or another.

I think our magazine could well include a balance of material from these sources. We would thus hope to continue among alumni that process of constructive exchange with other persons which was started here on campus. The (Newsletter) should also be a positive factor in the college's effort to utilize the unique qualifications of the alumni as a vital force in planning and supporting the future of the college.

Much could be said about what this will involve when translated into specific content material. But there is only one point which I shall take time to mention. I think the Newsletter should be used to set forth for the alumni some of the larger issues which are facing educators today. College administrative officers in America are in a period of self-evaluation. A serious attempt is being made to bring the program of college operations into line with the best knowledge now available in this field. Goshen is also faced with an urgent need to formulate a clearer idea of what the future character of the institution should be, in order to fulfill most effectively the objectives for which it is operated.

LETTERS to the Editor

STUDENT CHURCHGOING

Dear Editor:

Recently someone asked me if it is true that many students at GC do not attend Sunday school and church. They had heard that this was the case. I said the situation was not as serious as they had heard, but that there was room for a great deal of improvement.

The first three years at GC, I attended church and Sunday school at the College. During the latter two years, I attended at one of the mission stations nearby. My appreciation of the mission station was such that I had little desire to attend at the College.

During the past year I have had opportunity to speak with several people from the College congregation. They have told of earnest attempts during the year to increase student interest and participation in the life of the congregation. For these efforts, I believe the leaders of the congregation ought to be congratulated.

However, is it possible that the College ought to consider encouraging more of the students to participate in the life of congregations other than the College congregation? There are some of us who feel that as a congregation becomes bigger than about 300, there is a serious trend toward an impersonal type of congregational life, as well as a sharp decrease in the amount of participation and vital interest on the part of the individual. Admittedly, those students who have no interest in spiritual matters are not likely to be stimulated to spiritual growth merely because they worship with a small group instead of a large one. But, my own conviction at the present time is that in many cases the spiritual life of students has withered rather than grown, and that a major cause of this has been the student impression of the College congregation.

I would hesitate to mention this as a possible cause if I had not heard it many times while attending GC, and since that time. In pointing to this as a possible cause, it is not my desire to detract from the sincere efforts on the part of the congregation and the College. To bring these thoughts before the public is not a trivial matter. Yet, if there is truth here, let us heed its warning. If it is proved false, I hope that the real problem and its solution may be quickly found.

SOLICITATION

Dear Editor:

It seems that, every few months I answer a knock at my door and find a representative of Goshen College with hand extended, palm up!

Now I believe that the Alumni should give generously to the support of their Alma Mater. However, we seem to be reminded of this obligation a little often. This situation results from there being numerous avenues of approach. We are contacted through the church, through the Alumni Association and through special building drives or drives by departments for expansion and improvement.

Most of us find that we must budget our giving as well as our spending and we wish to extend our charity to the many worthy organizations that contact us. Therefore, I believe that if Goshen were to contact us once or twice a year, this would be adequate to acquaint us with the need and to remind us to set aside something for the college in the year's giving. This might be one large gift or a pledge for several gifts during the year. If there is no response a reminder might be sent to those who may have overlooked the opportunity to contribute to the school.

Goshen is becoming a large institution, expanding in many fields. It is quite possible that an alumnus would be more interested in supporting one phase of the college's program than another. Therefore, I think that a contributor should be permitted to specify the use to which his gift should be put.

I think Goshen's solicitation program needs more integration and organization.

After twenty-three years the Seminary looks towards co-operation, accreditment, expansion

The Future of Goshen's Biblical Seminary

by Harold S. Bender

THE PAST

During the 23 years since the Seminary program was established at Goshen in 1935, we have witnessed a gradual growth in curriculum, faculty, and student body. The program has been considerably expanded and enriched. A four-year Th.B. course was offered from the beginning. In 1942 this was enlarged to a five-year program. The three-year postgraduate B.D. course was first offered in 1946 and the M.R.E. in 1955.

With the entire program being reorganized in 1955 and the Th.B. degree discontinued in 1956, the Seminary has become a full graduate school. The only undergraduate degree now being offered is the B.R.E.

The Seminary was organized as a separate school within the general framework of the college in 1944, with a separate dean and faculty. However, it was not until 1946 that the name, "Biblical Seminary" was officially adopted. The long-planned separate classroom, library, and chapel building will be constructed next year, and should be ready for dedication in October, 1957.

Harold Bender, Dean of the Biblical Seminary since 1944, is on sabbatical leave this year. On Oct. 21 he and other representatives from North American Mennonite churches, left for a 4-week tour inside Russia. The delegation is traveling under the sponsorship of the Mennonite Central Committee and hopes to visit Mennonites now living behind the Iron Curtain.

Besides editing the Mennonite Encyclopedia, other plans for the year include writing a book on American Mennonite History, writing another on the Church and spending at least some time in further study somewhere. As chairman of the Mennonite World Conference, Bender will be going to Europe again this winter to lay plans for the 1957 conference. He will, of course, also be on hand at the conference in Karlsruhe, Germany, from August 9 to 16.

Bender received his Th.D. from Heidelberg University, Germany, in 1935. He has been on the Goshen faculty since 1924, serving as dean of the college 1933-44.

Accreditment

In 1954 the Seminary was elected as an associate member of the American Association of Theological Schools, the first step toward accreditment. Application for accreditment is now pending and action will be taken in December by the A.A.T.S. Commission on Accrediting.

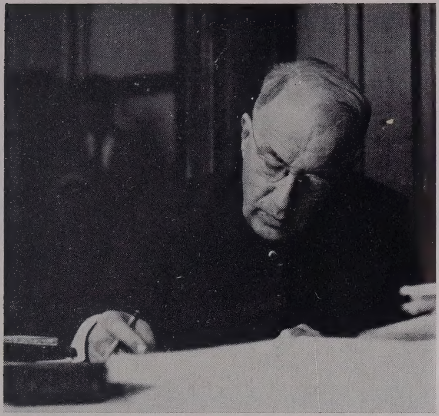
Accreditment is granted solely on the quality of work; theological position or church connection has no bearing. The minimum requirements include, four organized departments with at least four full-time instructors, at least 25 full-time students, adequate library holdings and a satisfactory continuing library budget, proved acceptance by and service to the church, stable and adequate financial income.

Accreditment is of value in placing the stamp of quality upon the school, and in guaranteeing transfer of credit and admission of graduates to advanced study in other seminaries.

Graduates

In the 23 years of its existence the Seminary has rendered a significant service through the work of its graduates and former students. Including the present year, nearly 400 students have been matriculated. Of these, 191 completed a degree curriculum, among them 16 women. Many have not been able to take the full program, but have profited from a year or more of study. The class of '56 was the largest, with 25 persons receiving 27 degrees.

Seminary alumni are found today largely in three areas of service, the local pastorate,



HAROLD BENDER, Dean of the Seminary

the foreign mission field, and institutional service such as teaching, writing, and administration. While most of the alumni are members of the Mennonite Church, a small number have come to us from other Mennonite branches (G.C.M., M.B., E.M.B., N.M.C.). A few students have come from other denominations, although most of these are local ministers from Goshen or Elkhart.

THE FUTURE

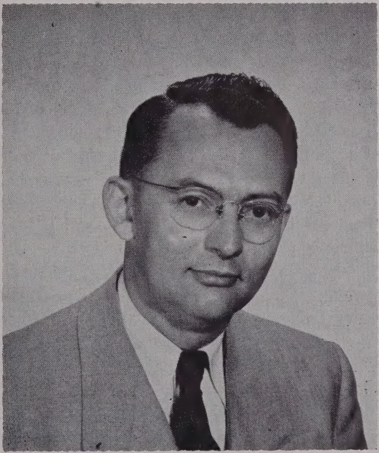
A major aspect of the future program of the Seminary will be the co-operation in ministerial training with other Mennonite and Brethren in Christ branches. A plan of co-operation is now being worked out in which the Mennonite Biblical Seminary of the General Conference Mennonite Church will move from Chicago, Ill., to Elkhart, Ind., and our Seminary will have a partially joint academic program with it. Several smaller groups will likely also join in this co-operative project which is to be called The Associated Mennonite Biblical Seminaries.

The General Conference Mennonites have purchased two tracts totaling 55 acres located just south of Elkhart between Hively Avenue and the Mishawaka Road. These lots are located along the line of the projected southward extension of Benham Ave. They expect to erect a $350,000 plant at this location within the next two years, hoping to begin operations at Elkhart in September, 1958.

Each of the two major institutions will be independent degree-granting schools with autonomous management and independent faculty, student body, finances, and degrees. There will be close co-ordination of the academic program, and up to one-third joint offering of courses at the Elkhart campus. There will also be a joint library in Elkhart, besides the smaller Goshen library and Mennonite Historical Library in Goshen.

An Institute of Mennonite Studies, also at Elkhart, is still to be developed. Thus, a center of Mennonite theological education will be established, and the several independent but co-operating programs will be enriched. Our Seminary hopes to both receive and contribute in this significant enterprise.

Future plans for the seminary also include strengthening the Christian Education field. Additional courses for both men and women will be offered, hoping that this will be a positive factor in the program of Christian Education throughout the church. The Seminary also plans to build up a stronger missionary training program although a separate school of missions will not be organized. This new program will include advanced work in linguistics, anthropology and courses of particular interest for missionaries on furlough.



ERLAND WALTNER has been selected by the General Conference for their Elkhart faculty

Seminary-cont'd.

The need for workers of all kinds, chiefly ministers, in the Mennonite Church, means that we should have an average of 40-50 students in attendance annually. Able and dedicated young men and women need to be recruited for preparation for the high calling of the ministry of the Gospel of Christ. We believe they will be forthcoming. The Associated Mennonite Biblical Seminaries should ultimately have a total student body of about 100 students each year.

THE PURPOSE

The Goshen College Biblical Seminary is primarily a ministerial training school. It seeks to provide men and women for the direct service of the church. Its program is therefore focused on this purpose. Only in a minor way does it seek to prepare scholars or advanced students in the field of Biblical and theological study. The Seminary has officially stated its purpose as follows:

1) To lead each student to a richer knowledge of God as revealed through Jesus Christ, to a deeper experience of fellowship with Him, and to the attainment of a discipleship in character and life which is truly Christian.

2) To lead each student to become a lover and master of the Word of God and an effective herald of its message through sound interpretation and faithful exposition.

3) To lead each student into a fuller sense of mission by appreciating the need for evangelism and preparing to give himself effectively to winning men for Christ.

4) To prepare students for a prophetic ministry, able to discern the times and the issues and the will of God for today, and to lead in the application of the Gospel to contemporary needs.

5) To help students to become good pastors and teachers, understanding the needs and appreciating the problems of their fellow men, and seeking to serve them in the spirit of Christ as stewards of the manifold grace of God.

6) To train all students to be good scholars and to prepare some to do the special work of advanced Christian scholarship in Biblical, historical, and practical fields, as needed by the church today.

An alumnus evaluates

His college experience

Is Goshen Preparing He

When Virgil Vogt asked me for an evaluation of the success of Goshen College in preparing her graduates for the world of 1956, I was momentarily taken aback. Aside from reading the alarming reports of the deficiencies of the American educational system in our national press, I have thought rather little about the broad aspects of education.

Furthermore, no alumnus can objectively evaluate the success of his Alma Mater's educational pattern. Inevitably he has been too much molded by it to be apart from it. He can only contrast his successes and disappointments against his dreams and his post-college experiences.

"Success" is an extremely elusive symbol. A "successful" businessman may have an unhappy marriage; a "successful" scholar may die an atheist. What is a "successful" preparation for me may be a waste of time for someone else. But, the very difficulties of such an evaluation have challenged me to think about it.

After graduating from Goshen in '51, Owen Gingerich went to Harvard University. He earned his MA there in 1953 and has completed all Ph.D. requirements except the thesis. While at Harvard Gingerich taught sections of the natural science general education course. He says some of the opinions expressed in the article grow out of his experience in grading about 500 essays during this time.

Owen and his wife, Miriam (Sensenig) 51, are now on a two-year term with the American University, Beirut, Lebanon. He is Director of Observatory and teaches two physics courses. Science courses are very popular among Near Eastern students, he reports.

raduates to Meet the World of 1956?

By Owen Gingerich

A college experience should be an organized and guided period of growth. Goshen College provides for this development not only intellectually, but also spiritually, socially, and physically. We all owe an inestimable debt to her for the vision of such an integrated program. Primarily, however, we think of college as an intellectual experience, and therefore let me evaluate it in those terms. In omitting these other significant aspects, this analysis can at best be only a partial discussion.

The college years should not only be a period of development, but the preparation for continued independent growth after college. If we have learned all the answers at Goshen College, so that our minds can enjoy a self-satisfied hibernation forever after, then she has failed in her educational program. Equally, if we meet problems for which Goshen College has not given us the foundation from which to seek new answers, or at least planted the seeds of solution, then she likewise has failed.

Space does not permit more than a brief mention of a few activities which prepare us for further growth: how the farsighted minor sports program of the athletic department provides basic skills in tennis and swimming which can be developed long after we take our diplomas; how the Bible Week lectures teach us respect for Biblical scholarship and stimulate us for continuing Bible study; how the extracurricular pursuits show us how to co-operate with our fellow students. For me, fine arts, philosophy, and the foreign languages among the liberal arts courses revealed new horizons which I continue to use and enjoy.

THE LIBERAL ARTS

A broad, basic liberal arts program (and here I refer to the required courses) fits in perfectly with Goshen's idea of a well-rounded education. I am a firm believer in "general education" or in "liberal arts," perhaps because I am a product of it. We cannot fail to be impressed when we hear that great technical schools like MIT are requiring more and more nonspecialized courses, or when we read that large corporations are spending hundreds of thousands of dollars to send their young executives to classes in art, philosophy, and literature.

A broad, basic liberal arts program does not insure preparation for continuing growth after college. It can be a grand intellectual smorgasbord where we dabble at facts here and there, but in which we scan so quickly that we get no appreciation of how the facts are found, or how they should be related to other things. We may get little indication of where to turn next if we wish to pursue the subject further. For instance, a course in literature should not only teach us to appreciate the masterpieces studied, but it should indicate to us how to select and enjoy other great works which are not discussed in class. A history course should give us the perspective to judge contemporary affairs by an understanding of the past. Facts taught in a science course will soon be forgotten, along with scientific laws and hypotheses, but the principles by which science works and by which it is limited would give an appreciation of its role in the world of 1956.

To a varying degree the courses at Goshen succeed in teaching more than facts. We might wish that civilization had included a little more of the philosophy of history and the various contemporary interpretations, or that psychology had prepared us to read intelligently the articles in the popular press about psychiatry. We might also argue that mathematics, as an indispensable tool for modern living, deserves a place among the required courses.

EASY COURSES

A much more important complaint is that too many of the liberal arts classes at Goshen were too easy. "Easy" is not a description of the grading scale, but of the work required. The percentage of A's and B's has no correlation with how industriously the students work. In one course, I rarely read even the textbook; the student with the highest grade not only didn't read his textbook, but he prepared for his next class during the lectures! This indictment applies to at least 18 hours of courses I took. My criticism must be tempered by the memory of at least as many courses in which I failed to make the best use of the study opportunities offered. Nevertheless, to waste a semester of college by taking required "snap" courses is indeed tragic.

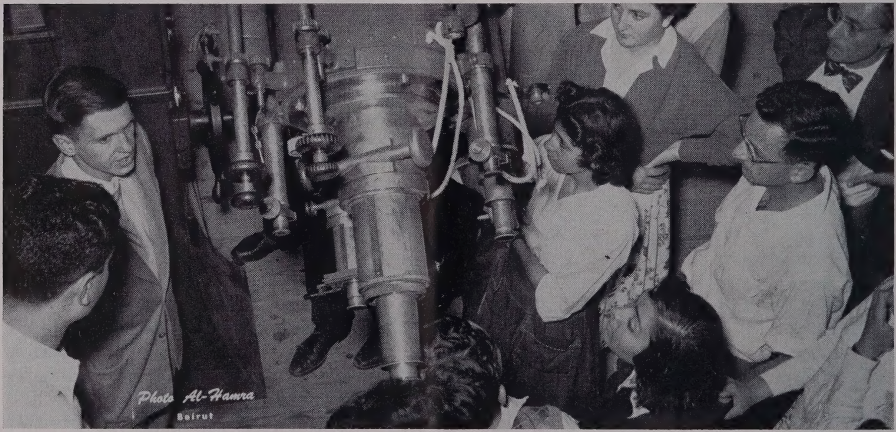
An adequate amount of reading and writing will take any class out of the "snap" course list. These are, indeed, the basic skills for continued growth in the years beyond college.

ESSAYS

How many Goshen College graduates will continue to write essays after commencement? I was surprised at the number, after I thought about it. Every minister preparing a sermon is essentially composing an essay. A teacher drafting a report to her principal, or even the correspondent writing a letter is creating one form of essay. A recent Alumni Newsletter with the report of eight Goshen faculty who are writing doctoral dissertations bears witness to the importance of the research essay.

Even without these endeavors, I would defend the assignment of frequent essays at Goshen on the grounds that those who learn to organize their thoughts by coherent writing will be better prepared for sound, logical thinking.

At Harvard, I was astonished to learn that for a single course the freshmen were required to write five essays, totaling 8,000 words. Multiply this by the four courses each student was taking, and you discover that each freshman must have ground out



OWEN GINGERICH, (upper left) lecturing in the observatory of American University, Beirut. He serves here as instructor in Physics as well as Director of the Observatory.

"Many of the . . . classes at Goshen were too easy."

30,000 words—a fair-sized book—in essays alone. Compare this with the 3,000 words required by the English clinic when I was a freshman at Goshen. Would it be too much to suggest that every course (barring math and certain lab courses) should require at least one 1,500 word paper per semester?

READING

Consider reading. Through reading an alumnus can continue unlocking doors to new knowledge long after he has left the lecture halls. Commencement will be the beginning of independent growth made possible through reading.

Does Goshen College take reading seriously? I estimate that I was required to read something like 5,000 pages of outside reading. This averages about 40 pages a week, approximately equivalent to one Time magazine. Would it be presumptuous to suggest that a college student should read at least 200 pages a week?

In how many courses did reading play an integral role? My criterion would not be which courses required reading reports or a specific number of pages—more than one student has scanned his quota, scarcely comprehending their contents. How many professors actually quizzed their students on this reading? In all my college courses, only one or two ever did so.

More reading is important, but that is not enough. The reading must not only be done carefully, but critically. How many unorthodox opinions are found on the reserve shelves? Does Goshen College teach its students that much of what appears in print just isn't so? Perhaps students could be required to read books with opposing viewpoints, and then discuss the points of conflict critically in an essay.

A balanced program of lectures, reading, and writing should form the foundation of every course. Only in this way will students be guided to an appreciation of the techniques of independent study and development. Such a program of more reading and essays, and less "spoon-fed" lecturing could hardly come overnight. The greatest obstacle is Goshen's sprawling extracurricular activities program. Forensics, chorus, journalism—these are all legitimate paths to growth, enjoyable and profitable. Nevertheless, when a student takes on half a dozen extracurricular activities, which I believe is not unusual, coupled with a steady series of evening and week-end programs he is encouraged to attend, there isn't much time for outside reading and writing. The gentle pressure of increasing academic assignments could slowly bring the extracurricular activities back into proper perspective.

So much for the nonspecialist, who seeks a broad, general education. But what about the nurses and premeds, the teachers and ministers? For these, I think the specialized program of courses at Goshen has been successful. Spokesmen for each of these groups continue to praise their training. Naturally, there is always room for improvement; any strengthening of the basic liberal arts courses would benefit these specialists as well.

We all recognize that Goshen just isn't large enough to train specialists in every area. There is, however, one important area which seems to have been neglected. Very little special attention is paid to that minority group of students who will continue to graduate school. From this group, for example, most of Goshen's future faculty will be recruited.

Looking forward to the advanced training required by these persons, individual "reading and research" courses should be given, in which a future graduate student would work closely with his major professor in an investigation of special topics, which would generally result in a long research paper. A few departments at Goshen already require such a semester seminar, but this should be extended to the others, and good students should be allowed to elect this course more than once, with different topics each time.

OUTSIDE IDEAS

Many graduate students, and some of our missionary alumni as well, have complained of another omission in the Goshen College educational scene. Too often the college is overly isolated and insulated from outside ideas. Many of us were not at all prepared to meet the arguments of several modern philosophies and ideologies which are powerful in the world of 1956. How many times did the class of 1951 hear about existentialism or Freud? How much did we learn in order to evaluate Marxism or evolution? Did we really find out enough about liberal or modernistic theologies to refute them?

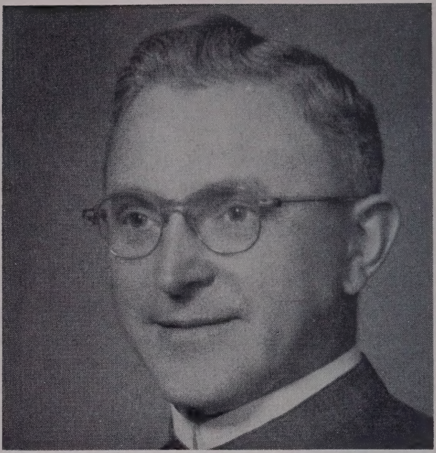
Some of these ideas are actively debated in graduate schools, as well as on many mission fields; others are already assumed. A truly good defense of our Christian beliefs cannot be made if we do not understand the tenets of these conflicting ideas.

Probably the outstanding heresy on the modern university campus is the feeling that one religion is as good as any other. Christians who do not know the basic teachings of Catholicism, Mohammedanism, Hinduism, or Buddhism are definitely at a disadvantage in discussions of this sort. Our relief workers and missionaries, too, are meeting these non-Christian religions throughout the world. At Goshen College, preparation for meeting the claims of these other beliefs is inadequate. A properly taught course in comparative religions should not be out of place at Goshen.

Another course which has been missing too long from Goshen's curriculum is geology. It is high time we stop maintaining an ostrich attitude on this topic, and face realistically this legitimate science.

I personally feel that a valuable elective course dealing with a variety of modern thinkers could be offered for seniors. Such a class might study the work of half a dozen men like Gandhi, Schweitzer, Marx, Toynbee, Freud, John Dewey, Bertrand Russell, or even Darwin. Included would be reading from the original writings of these men and their disciples, as well as their critics. The students could then write an evaulation of each man after studying him for several weeks. Perhaps a number of faculty would contribute to the course, each specializing in one thinker.

My own post-college work in graduate school colors my thinking in this entire evaluation. These suggestions are idealistic, perhaps even unrealistic. They are offered seriously, not so much as adverse criticism, but as suggestions for improvement. Here's to the continuing success and growth of Goshen College.



BURKHART is well known as GC's field secretary

On the evening of August 26, 1934, we arrived in Goshen, Indiana, from Hesston, Kansas, with our model A Ford and a trailer loaded with furniture and belongings. We numbered four—Mrs. Burkhart, Charles, age 6, Charlotte, age 2, and Yours Truly. The following January Joyce guided the stork out of the clouds into the City of Goshen. So there were five of us.

For the past 22 years it has been my privilege to serve Goshen College, for three years in teaching full time, and the last nineteen years in fund raising, under the leadership of three presidents—Sanford C. Yoder, Ernest E. Miller, and Paul E. Mininger. Someday I may try to write a tribute to the friendship and the inspiration that these men afforded me, because I feel greatly indebted to each one of them. In a sense they have become a part of my life and my personality. But this must not be done now. The alumni editor has asked what we expect to do during the sabbatical leave which has been granted us and which runs from September 1956 to June 1957. He has also asked for some observations based upon experiences while representing the needs of Goshen College to her constituency.

Since there are at least two people involved, let us call this "our" sabbatical, not "my" sabbatical. It could be said without hesitation that whatever success was

by I. E. Burkhart

achieved in raising funds for Goshen College can be attributed to the steadfast co-operation and patient sacrifice at the home base by Mrs. Burkhart, the former Gladys Loucks 25. With her, as with me, Goshen College was worth the price. If it was a sacrifice for me to be away from home about half the time each year, it was no less so for Mrs. Burkhart and the family. However, and she agrees, sacrifices mutually shared bring with them compensations and a later fragrance that obliterates all regrets. We would do it all over again.

The first semester of the sabbatical will be given (1) to transition assistance (parts of September and early October) for J. Robert Kreider, the new director of fund raising, and (2) to family affairs, vacation and travel. The second semester will be given to special study and preparation for the new assignment at Goshen College. Mr. Kreider takes over the responsibility of co-ordination and promotion of financial solicitation, and will be assisted, as I have been the last two years, by A. Dale Bixler 26. My duties next year will be more limited to estate planning, life income agreements, bequests and wills—the long-range aspect of college fund raising.

Many times when on college trips in Pennsylvania and the East, there have been opportunities to join friends in sight-seeing diversions. Except for one invitation to go deep-sea fishing off the New Jersey Coast, these invitations were consistently turned down "until such time as Mrs. Burkhart could share the pleasure." Now that time has come, and during October and November Mrs. Burkhart and I plan to spend a month or six weeks in Pennsylvania, New England, and possibly the Canadian Maritime Provinces—depending in part on our ability to make a travel dollar do double duty, and our capacity to assimilate non-work experiences. There will be no fixed schedule, and we plan to see as many interesting people and significant things as a leisurely program will permit. Then, as stated, the second semester must be given to more serious pursuits.

THE LESSONS OF EXPERIENCE

Now let us turn to the second part of the editor's request, and point out a number of things which the business of fund raising has caused one to think about during the years. Some of my friends think that someday I should write a book telling of experiences in fund raising. I may do this but why write a book when you can actually be out making history? However here are five things which have impressed me over and over again and which I submit for your consideration.

First a fund raiser's troubles are mostly of his own creation. To the superintendent of an orphanage who said, "There is no such thing as a bad boy," I offer the corollary that there is no such thing as a bad prospect for a solicitor. Those people who "blow their tops," who "get all burned up" about things, are usually frustrated in the attainment of certain desires. The solicitor who comes to them in a spirit of understanding and fair play will never get a scolding. He will more likely be invited to stay for dinner. It is marvelous how friendly people become when they detect friendly understanding on the part of those who approach them. People are not "funny," they are interesting.

Irvin Burkhart, a native of Drayton, Ont., was editor of the Maple Leaf when he was a Goshen senior in 1926. Further studies took him to Southern Baptist Seminary, where he received a Th.M. in 1929, and to the University of Pittsburgh where he earned an M.A. in History. As he indicates in his article, the past 22 years have been spent at Goshen.

I have also learned that most people enjoy solicitation, if the cause interests them and if the procedures of the representative suit them. Effective fund raising has the following requisites: (a) a good prospect, and they are all good, (b) a fair representative, and they all try to be so; (c) a worthy cause; (d) a real story pointed at a definite need; and (e) an appropriate time. When these five ingredients are all brought together at the same time in a solicitation situation, the consultation will be a delightful experience for all concerned. Fine folks, fair play, a useful cause, facts and illustrations to make clear definite needs, and then sharing, this is living on a high level and people do enjoy it. If anyone doubts it, please come to my office and let me read to you from 100 "Best Letters" saved during the solicitation years. I have saved letters which portray hearts of gold and "acres of diamonds."

A STRONG CHALLENGE

Secondly, in these years, the conviction has also grown upon me that financial promotion for a Christian college can be a career with great compensation and a strong challenge. It is the selling end of the education business. While teaching is the primary function of the college, finances are a primary need in carrying out this function. One becomes quite emotionalized when he remembers that Goshen College liquidated her depression debts in 1942 to 1943; built a heating plant in 1944 to 1945; the Union building 1945 to 1950; Westlawn and dining hall, 1950 to 1953; and is now on the home stretch with a nurses' dormitory and an arts classroom building realized from 1953 to 1956. Thousands of students will use these facilities, and after that they go to their places of usefulness and service. One of the joys of a lifework is to visualize these hundreds and hundreds of youth who have found Goshen College a profitable place to study and to work.

Thirdly, during these years I have come to realize that great teaching is more to be desired than plenty of money. Every teacher on the Goshen College faculty could receive more money if he would sell his training and his gifts to the highest bidder. The devotion and the sacrificial service of the Goshen College faculty are as gems among precious jewels. Such loyalty as theirs has been a constant source of encouragement in representing the College to the alumni and the constituency. Goshen College teachers and staff are at their posts by choice. When they decided to cast their lot with a small Christian college, they were not reaching for money, and they knew it. It is a great privilege to be associated with colleagues of the sacrificial order.

A TRANSITION

And finally, in a more profound sense I would like to suggest that Goshen College alumni and the Mennonites generally are in a transition from isolation to participation in the great stream of life to be found in the world. Some people call this drifting. They should rather call it a valiant effort to adapt principles to changing times and changing needs, when old things are passing away and when new discoveries and new methods are battering down the inhibitions and the prejudices of generations. In changing times, Christian education is absolutely essential if the transition is to avoid tragedy. During the past twenty years I have witnessed the change from horse and buggy to mechanization, and all the many related changes that came along with this transition.

As I leave the more strenuous responsibilities of fund raising, and as I prepare for the more specialized long-range solicitation, I appeal to all alumni to share with Mr. Kreider, and his aides, the same good will and financial support as you have given me. It is my hope and prayer, that when the results are turned over to the great Evaluator we will see that Goshen College rendered an invaluable service to her supporters and friends.

Public Programs—Prospects for this Year

Lecture Music Series Features Five Musical Events, Four Lectures

"One chief purpose of a Lecture-Music series such as ours," states committee chairman Willard Smith, fac 29-, "is to promote intelligent and constructive thinking on public questions." Thus he explains the appearance of Hodding Carter, editor and publisher from Greenville, Miss., who will speak on Race Relations as Seen by a Southerner. Hodding is scheduled for March 21. Judge Luther Youngdahl's lecture on October 20, discussing Morality in Government, was another manifestation of this L-M purpose.

Robert Friars, with an illustrated lecture on England and Scotland, will be featured over the Homecoming week end. The practice of having two appearances for Homecoming audiences will be discontinued this year and Friars will give his lecture only on Friday evening, November 23.

Choral programs will be provided on November 14 and December 6 by the National Swedish Chorus and The Singing Boys of Norway, respectively. On January 28, the Detroit Symphony Orchestra will give the year's major symphonic program. Leopold Stokowski has described the Detroit orchestra as, "One of the truly great orchestras of the world," and the director, Paul Paray, as, "one of the world's five greatest living conductors."

Other important musical events are scheduled for February 5, when world renowned pianist, Dame Myra Hess, will appear, and on March 1, when the popular Quartetto Italiana will present a program of chamber music.

The beloved, "philosopher of the forest." Sam Campbell, will close the series on April 11, with a lecture, Colorado—Mountain Wonderland. It will be illustrated with his own natural color motion pictures, including the usual wild-animal sequence.

Motet Singers Will Not Be Organized

Dean Kreider's notice on the bulletin board simply said, "Motet Singers will not be organized during the academic year 1956-57." With Mary Oyer spending only three days per week on campus this year, Motet's heavy schedule of practice and performance just couldn't be squeezed in.

Mary leaves every Thursday evening for Ann Arbor, Mich., and doesn't return until Monday evening. She is completing work on a doctor's degree in the Music Arts at the University of Michigan.

She has completed the residence requirements and all that remains to be done is the preparation and presentation of three cello recitals. These recitals are being substituted for the usual doctoral dissertation since she is working toward a degree in musical performance. Graduate schools are just beginning to offer this degree in musical performance and Miss Oyer is practically the first student to enter the new curriculum at Ann Arbor.

Memoirs of a European Summer

by Viola Good

One important aspiration of our summer in Europe was to contact as many of the European alumni as possible. Those whose addresses we had were informed of our itinerary ahead of schedule.

Upon arrival in London our first communication came from Dr. Lenze Meinsma 46-47*. We had a pleasant visit with him at the London Center. Dr. Meinsma is now engaged in cancer research for the Dutch government. Incidentally, he promised a letter to the Alumni News Office describing his work. How about it, Dr. Meinsma?

Another interesting contact came in the meeting with Lewis Waiyaki 52-53, who is now studying law in London. Waiyaki planned for an afternoon visit to Windsor Castle, the place where the Royal family often goes for relaxation. In traveling to the Castle we enjoyed our first ride in an Italian Fiat 600. Waiyaki is planning to return to his people in Kenya upon the completion of his studies.

At Amsterdam, Holland, we made contact with Meindertje Kuitse 46-47, who is now engaged in social welfare work in the Amsterdam area. Due to her kindness we also met Mrs. Kristians, the former Eke van der Schaaf 46-47, and visited Elspeet, the "Little Eden" of the Dutch Mennonites. In Amsterdam we also had the happy privilege of visiting with the families of Jan Breeuwer 55-56 and Jan Gleysteen 53-54. While visiting the Paul Benders at Heerewegen, we were able to call on Eke Talsma 48-49, who was teaching Home Economics in Zeist. She has since been married to Rev. Heynes who is a minister in the Dutch Mennonite Church in Friesland.

In Frankfurt, Germany, we found Margot Stauffer 51-52, now Mrs. Dwight Wiebe, in charge of material aid at MCC headquarters. Here it was that we had a nice visit with Gerhart von Beckerath 48-49. He has received his doctor's degree in economics and is now assistant to the manager of a coal and steel company in Aachen, Germany. In this capacity von Beckerath finds an outlet for his keen interest in the economic unification of Europe. Karlheinz Arnold 50-51 lives in Frankfurt where he continues his father's antique business. His wife serves the U.S. Military in dentistry. We spent an enjoyable evening in their home. Gerhart von Beckerath accompanied us so we had the happy privilege of introducing these two alumni to each other.

We met Dr. Ursula van Duhren 48-49 in Berlin where she is now interning. Her husband, Dr. Christian Ehlers, is a practicing physician in Berlin. Ursula Byers 48-49 accompanied us on a guided tour of East and West Berlin. She is presently serving as hospital chaplain in West Berlin.

Friends of Wally Klassen will be interested to know that we had an enjoyable visit with her at Cologne, Germany. She is working in the office of the Leverkusen-Bayerwerk near Cologne.

From Frankfurt we made a side trip to Kaiserslautern, Germany, where we met Tina van der Laag 48-50, now Mrs. Herman Wernecke, and her husband and their 17-month-old son. Mr. Wernecke is in the print-

Viola Good 39, has been Dean of Women since she joined the Goshen faculty in the fall of 1939. She and Olive Wyse fac 26-, spent 10 weeks traveling together in Europe this summer. This combination of names appearing on the same travel reservations and tickets prompted several interesting incidents. One European travel agent signed his letter with best wishes for, "Wiser Olives and Better Violas."

In this article Miss Good tells briefly of visits with various European alumni. Besides these reports, travelers Wyse and Good came back affirming that, "The queen looks just like her pictures."

ing business. On this trip also, we stopped at Enkenbach, Germany, to see the Pax boys at work building houses for refugees. From Bad Durkheim, Germany, Lucinda Snyder accompanied us to Weiler, France. En route we stopped at Bergzabern, Germany, to call on Liesel Widmer's mother and sister. What a pleasant interlude! While in this area we also called at the home of Gertrude Gassman 47-49—now Mrs. Marvin Dress—in Cleebourg, France. Gertrude and her husband and little girl were at home on a visit while we were there. Mary Byler Klassen 45 took us to visit Lydia Nussbaumer Hege 49-50. Lydia and her husband and little girl live on a large farm with her husband's parents.

In Geneva, Switzerland, we contacted the families of Lydia Muller 53-54 and Ruth Pfrunder 54-56. Lydia's brother called for us and took us to the Muller family home just across the border in Prevessin, France. Here we gathered around a large table and enjoyed the family fellowship and French delicacies. The afternoon afforded an opportunity to call at the Pfrunder home and to visit the Palace of Nations. In the evening the Pfrunders joined us at the Muller home and after an unforgettable evening brought us back to our hotel in Geneva.

In situations like these our facility with the German language, though limited, helped us a great deal. To be able to say, "Wir sprecken ein wenig Deutsch," contributed much to the enjoyment of our summer experience. We often wished for some knowledge of French. It would have served us in Italy as well as in France, where we wanted so much to converse with people on the trains.

In Basel, Switzerland, we visited in the home of John Howard 47 and Annie (Guth) Yoder 50 and their delightful little girls. In their home we met Erich Dohler 52-53, who is presently employed in his father's florist shop. We also enjoyed genuine hospitality in the home of Regina Nussbaumer 48-49. Regina is succeeding Mary Byler Klassen at the Weiler Children's Home in France.

From Basel we took an interesting side trip to Karlsruhe, Germany, where we had the happy privilege of meeting Adolf Schnebele 49-50 and his wife and little boy. Adolf preached at Thomashof, Germany, the Sunday we were there. Willy Peterschmidt 50-52 and his wife and little girl and Anne Comtesse 54-55 came to see us at Thomashof the Sunday we were there and we had a nice visit. Mr. Peterschmidt is a traveling preacher in the French Mennonite Church as is Adolf Schnebele for the German Mennonites.

ON HER WAY to Europe, Miss Good leaves Elkhart

We spent a day and a half at Freiburg, Germany, at the invitation of Lore Rittmayer 50-51. Lore is at present attending the University of Freiburg where she is working on her doctorate in English. She and her brother together with Glendon Jantzi 52 showed us a very nice time in Freiburg. We shall long remember this visit including the experience at the Bauerhof in the Black Forest.

Naturally all these contacts meant a great deal to us. We regret that there were those whom we missed by a close margin, such as Samuel Lehman 47-48, Doris Neff 50-51, and Hans Hillerbrand 51-52, and others who were too far off our path. There were also the contacts with many former American GC students now serving in various capacities in Europe, who are outside the scope of my assignment now, but whose evident dedication to their work encouraged us to return to our tasks at the home base with renewed enthusiasm.

Spiritual Emphasis Week

Kreider Speaks of Christ And the men He met

by Virginia Ryan

Chances are you are too well adjusted to your environment. According to Dean Carl Kreider most of us fit too snugly with the outside world.

Kreider's chapel talks, September 17-21, took as a basis the reactions of four types of people to Jesus Christ. These four were the scholar, the politician, the rich man, and the religiously minded.

"Not only are we too well adjusted," said Kreider, "We are all too ready to compromise." Pilate, the politician of Jesus' day, made a compromise because of a misplaced loyalty. "Where is our ultimate loyalty?" Kreider asked. "Pilate found his washbowl convenient and used it willingly." Kreider then asked, "Have we found that Pilate's washbowl is convenient for our use?"

Nor was there room for compromise in Jesus' reaction to the students of His day, described by Dean Kreider from the example of Paul and Gamaliel. "Tolerance is good," Kreider stated, "but there are issues for which neutrality would be a deadly danger." In drawing a lesson from the example of Paul, Kreider said, "Jesus would prefer our hatred to our neutrality."

Advice to college students came with Kreider's lesson from Paul and Gamaliel: "Never shift to the teacher the responsibility of making up your mind."

"Jesus' lessons to the rich," Dean Kreider said, "are lessons for you and me today. Compared with the people of Jesus' day we are rich. From Jesus' teaching on wealth, we see that if our possessions form a wedge between ourselves and God we must give them up."

Kreider's final address described Jesus facing the religiously minded of his day. "There are certain things Jesus condemned among the religiously minded: ostentation, insincerity, and lack of faith."

Mennonites have a high record of achievement in relief work, missions, and other areas. "But," Kreider said, "the Christian can't live off accumulated capital."

Dean Kreider's talks provided an appropriate and inspirational opening to the 1956-57 school year. —The Record.

FRESHMEN GET AN INTRODUCTION TO THE WOMAN'S HOUSE GOVN. ASS.

How to Matriculate 246 Freshmen

What does it take to make a college student out of a person who never was one before? At Goshen it takes five or six busy, "Freshman Days."

The program involving 246 freshmen got under way this year on September 6. Interspersed with the unpleasant realities of the heavy testing schedule were introductions, welcoming speeches, physical examinations, socials, library tours, and a hymn sing.

TRYING to get moved in, Julia Brandeberry finds the assistance of her family almost essential.

WELDY LEADS FRESHMEN AS THEY SING GC SONG FOR THE FIRST TIME.

CAROLYN MORRISON takes her physical exam.

Enrollment Trends

The full-time enrollment of 680 this semester tops all previous enrollments at Goshen College. The previous high for a school year was 668 in 1955-56 with a fall enrollment of 630. The part-time enrollment of 184 is approximately the same as last year.

This fall's eight per cent increase in full-time enrollment is accounted for almost entirely by the increase in the size of the freshman class. This is the largest entering class ever to enroll at Goshen College. The increase in the number of freshmen enrolled from 198 in the fall of 1955 to 246 at the present time is a 24 per cent increase.

Of interest also is the fact that only 75 per cent of last year's freshmen returned to make up this year's sophomore class. A fluctuation in the size of classes is evidenced by a slight decrease in the size of the sophomore class from last year, a decrease in the junior class of 15 and an increase in the senior class of 29. The larger enrollment in the Liberal Arts College, 649 as compared to 587 last year, offsets the lower enrollment in the Biblical Seminary, 31 as compared to 43 last year. The spring of 1956 marked the termination of the Th.B. program of study in the Seminary, thus all 27 persons who are enrolled in the upper division of the Seminary are studying in either the B.D. or M.R.E. program.

The proportion of men and women enrolled is equal this year. Last year the men outnumbered the women for the first time since 1951. The number of men who are in college after a period of I-W service continues to rise. A total of 60, or 18 per cent, of the men students enrolled for full-time study have completed terms of I-W service. A distribution by classes follows: seniors, 14; juniors, 18; sophomores, 9; freshmen, 17; advanced seminary, 1; post graduate, 1. Last fall 44 ex I-W men were enrolled while only 12 were enrolled in the fall of 1954. It is expected that this number may rise higher in the next few years, but probably less sharply than in the past two years. Veterans number 16, constant with last year's number.

Thirty-three upperclassmen have transferred from other colleges to Goshen College for full-time study. This is a decrease of 27 from the 1955 figure and constitutes the lowest number of transfer students since the fall enrollment of 1945 when the number was 28. Ten students transferred from Eastern Mennonite College and nine students from Hesston College. Five transfer students are enrolled in the Biblical Seminary.

The 80-20 proportion of Mennonite and non-Mennonite students is the same as last year. One hundred forty-seven Mennonite students are members of the Ohio and Eastern A.M. Conference outnumbering the members of the Indiana-Michigan Conference by 2. In addition to the 546 (Old) Mennonite students, 36 are enrolled from other Mennonite branches.

It is customary to end this analysis of enrollment trends with a prediction for the fall enrollment of the following year. The prediction for the upperclasses is based on an average of the retention experience over the past five years for each class. Using this method we may expect the 1957 enrollment in the upper classes to be about as follows: seniors, 140; juniors, 120; and sophomores, 185. The fall enrollment in the freshman class has increased an average of about nine per cent per year over the past five years. Based on this per cent of increment the freshman class in the fall of 1957 will number 270. It is expected that at least 25 persons will enroll for graduate study in the seminary which will bring the total full-time enrollment to 740.
